The Convenient Earth

Paris, June 23—Four o'clock in the afternoon in Paris is 11 a. m. in New York. Convenient for one who must write as he travels and make a newspaper deadline in New York. Writing from San Francisco or Seattle it is the other way. Four o'clock in the Far West means seven o'clock in New York, or eight o'clock in daylight saving time. In London and Paris the convenient difference is five hours. That idea of having the earth go around the sun was a good one for newspaper men traveling east.

On crossing we encountered one or two dull, wet days, the sky almost touching the water, barely room and "vision for a Mother Carey's chicken between waves" and ceiling. But such weather will not affect ocean flying, soon to come. A little distance above that grey ceiling, only six miles up, the sun shines always. No fog, cloud or rain or storms; a gentle, perpetual eastward wind, caused by the earth's rotation. Up where the atmosphere is thin and high speeds will be easy, the ideal travel lane has been waiting for man a very long time.

The learned Doctors Wilkins and Rayton, physicists of Rochester University, judging by the transformation of uranium into lead, assure you that two thousand five hundred million years have passed since a small piece broke away from the sun and became "the earth."

No stormy atmosphere when you go up a little way. No stormy waters when you sink a short distance below the surface waves. All quiet down there; no deep sea fish ever saw a wave.

Goethe said, "On all high peaks there is peace." There is peace at great depths also. All the storm and trouble is reserved for the thin round slice of earth, water and air in which man struts, frets, sails and flies his little hour and is seen no more.

The Paris court has indicted seven dealers in foodstuffs for increasing prices. They take that more seriously in France than we do in America. Since a famous French wheat corner long ago, the punishment for conspiring to raise the price of wheat in France is prison, cas travaux forces. A kind of hard labor that would discourage some of our racketeer big shots. In spite of his good intentions, Joseph, who engineered the wheat deal for Pharaoh, would have gone to jail had he been a Frenchman.

The Republican convention in Cleveland sang, to the tune of "Three Blind Mice," a song about "Three Long Years," describing many sorrows between 1933 and 1936.

Mr. V. Y. Dallman, delegate-at-large to the Democratic convention in Philadelphia, editor of the Illinois State Register, sends to Postmaster Farley a reply to the Republican "Three Long Years" song. His song title is "Twelve Long Years," sung to the same tune of "Three Blind Mice"; it begins:

"They called us donkey—braying cranks,
But all they gave to win our thanks
Was bathtub gin and busted banks
For twelve long years."

Mr. Farley says all songs will be gratefully received and thoughtfully considered, but it is understood that he would rather write the laws of the country than write its songs, campaign songs at least.

"Seest thou a man diligent in his business, he shall stand before kings"—money kings at least.

The late Nathan Burkan, lawyer and Tammany leader, died young, but his widow and little boy will get a million and a half. To some lawyers that seems small. Louis Levy once got two million dollars in one fee, fortunately before the big income tax days.

A distinguished lawyer, formerly in the Cabinet of the United States, charged and got two hundred and fifty thousand dollars for reading through and approving, without change, one trust paper prepared by the late R. W. De Forest. The great Rufus Choate, in more modern days, apologized for charging twenty-five hundred dollars, saying he had studied the problem for thirty years.

PICK CURLEY TO FLAY 'AL' AND ELY

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY
Boston American Staff Writer

Philadelphia, June 24—Three moves to put Governor Curley in the spotlight made the Massachusetts delegation a center of attention at the Democratic convention today.

The moves are:

1—An attempt to have him designated for a convention address in reply to the Smith-Ely condemnation of the New Deal.

2—A move, tentatively successful, to have him make one of the seconding speeches for President Roosevelt.

GRANFIELD NAMED

At the same time, Massachusetts was signally honored by selection of Congressman William J. Granfield of Springfield to head the conventions committee on credentials.

Bay State delegates started the movement to give Gov. Curley an opportunity of answering the Smith-Ely attacks, but delegates from other parts of the country were joining them, and this was not hurting the Curley vice-presidency boom.

Philadelphia, June 24—The delegates assembled in caucus in the Adelphia tap room fear they are seeing double when The Senator comes in.

While this is a condition not ordinarily expected to disturb a convention delegate, it is much too early in the morning and there is a general sigh of relief goes up when it is noted that what The Senator is accompanied by is not his twin but a live animal that has four legs and flies all around.

FITZGERALD ASKS BOOST IN DOG TAX

A vigorous demand was made on Governor Curley today by former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald to force the legislature to give the people of Massachusetts a "square deal" on dog racing.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars which should go into the public treasury, to reduce taxes, goes into the pockets of fewer than a dozen persons, Fitzgerald asserted in a letter to the Governor.

The legislature was denounced by the former mayor as being too cowardly to take a rollcall when it rejected the Governor's measure for increasing the state's "take" on dog racing from three and a half to five per cent.

FACES EMBARRASSMENT

Fitzgerald demands that the governor force the legislature to act, to make the dog track operators pay the state the same share horse-track owners do.

He said he will be embarrassed in cam,-igning for the Democratic

REVOLT TIES UP PORT OF MARSEILLE

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT

Paris, June 24 — Six hundred striking shipyard workers seized possession of two French battle cruisers, and red flags fluttered over 68 strike-paralyzed merchant ships as the Leftist government of Premier Leon Blum won another smashing victory in the Chamber of Deputies.

The chamber accorded an overwhelming 382 to 198 vote of confidence to Blum's foreign policy as the domestic crisis grew with the shipyard laborers at Saint Nazaire occupying two cruisers and halting construction of six submarines.

The entire harbor of Marseilles was tied up as revolutionary banners floated from the masts of commercial ships occupied by striking seamen.

Locust Valley, N. Y., June 24 (INS)—Cash and jewels valued at more than $400,000 were stolen early this morning from the Upper Brookville home of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Coe, Sr., Police Inspector Harold R. King of Nassau county announced.

Coe, wealthy race horse owner, discovered the loss upon awakening. The jewels were secreted in two silk bags in a dresser drawer in a room adjoining Mrs. Coe's bedroom.

Principal items in the loot was a $300,000 pearl necklace. Other pieces included a smaller string of pearls worth $30,000, a $38,000 diamond ring and a $38,000 wedding ring, several rings of undetermined value, a gold traveling clock and a gold cigarette case. Coe's wallet, containing $625, and $75 dollars laying in the drawer also were taken.

DEMOCRATS KILL TIME WAITING NOMINATION

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Convention Hall, Philadelphia, June 24—In a gala mood, the unterrified hosts of Democracy trooped back to Philadelphia's big convention hall today for a session of fun-making which was to precede the big moment—the re-nomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt and John N. Garner.

That will be Friday, the convention had a lot of time to kill. The gaval was banged by Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, temporary chairman and key-noter, at 1:17 p. m. E. D. T. on a spectacle of vast unoccupied areas. A machine gun could have been shot through the galleries with few casualities.

NOT NICE IN RAIN

The delegates appreciated the situation by staying away. Likewise the visitors. It was raining outside, and delegates and visitors alike seemed to prefer the comfort of their hotel rooms to the numid hall where a band and a pipe organ vied with each other for attention.

As the delegates slowly assembled, the platform committee was holding an open session at which everybody was given a chance to speak his piece. Everybody who had a plank—and there were plenty of them—was given a hearing.

conclave in Philadelphia. The only parallel, in fact, goes back to 1916 in St. Louis, where the Democrats renominated Woodrow Wilson on the philosophy that "he kept us out of war."

Here was no minority party fighting for a place in the sun. Here was the majority party, confident, militant, feeling its strength and looking forward to November with a feeling of complacency and composure.

'NO APOLOGY, NO RETREAT!' ROOSEVELT'S WAR CRY

BARKLEY SAYS NEW DEAL SAVED U. S. FROM RUIN

Philadelphia, June 24 (INS)—"No apology and no retreat."

Flying this flag at the masthead, the Democratic national convention, assembling in Philadelphia to renominate President Roosevelt and Vice-President Garner, went into its second session today on an aggressive note.

"No apology and no retreat."

This was the keynote furnished by Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, in an impassioned address to the 1100-odd delegates last night—a keynote that will be embellished tonight when Senator Joe T. Robinson of Arkansas, takes over the gavel as permanent chairman of the convention. Senator Robinson was "Al" Smith's running mate in 1928, and he has a score to settle with him in that regard. What Barkley left unsaid last night, Robinson will say tonight.

"We stand before the American people," said Barkley, "without apology and without retreat.

"We need to rename, and subsequently to re-elect, to the highest office within our gift, a man whose build-up is his record."

Two thousand delegates and alternates, plus other thousands in the galleries, rotated approval of the keynoter's statements. The Kentucky senator, noted for his oratory, was in rare form, and he literally went to town in his summation of the Roosevelt record and in derisive comment about the claims of the opposition.

Sen. Barkley's speech follows in part:

Ladies and gentlemen of the convention:

We have assembled, as we have done for more than a century, to justify in government a liberalism designed to promote those which outweigh all political formalism and all conceptions of special privilege.

We are assembled here not merely to defend but to proclaim the New Deal.

We need to rename, and subsequently to re-elect, to the highest office with our gift a man whose build-up is his record.

As we survey the picture which the world presents and contemplate the four trade years just prior to 1933, and the slow but steady progress of our country under this Democratic administration, we are moved by a sense of profound gratitude that the nation today looks into the future with eyes that see within reach the goal of a happier and more abundant life for all our people.

We come to this convention in the name of a democracy which is national in its historic background, in its approach to and willingness to deal in a national way with problems that are national in scope.

We recognize the complexity of modern life. We covet no power that would deprive the states of the right to deal locally with local responsibilities. These are adequate to consume the energies of all who are willing to devote themselves to their solution.

In Changing Era

But we recognize the undeniable and self-evident fact that because of our growth in territory, population, wealth, the means of production, distribution and consumption and the facilities of transportation and communication which have knitted the American people into a nation, certain great vital questions affecting the daily lives of the people as a whole have been projected into our economic and social structure.

In this age of infinite complexity, of mutual dependence of community on community, state on state and nation on nation, all responsible governments must enlarge their field of activity and supervision to the end that the weak may be protected from the strong and rapacious and the augmentation of justice among all classes may be secured.

This is a moving, changing world in which we live. New generations, viewing the discarded smell of ancient theories, and impatient with the fatal doctrine of defeatism, are asking why, among all the arts and sciences and achievements of man, only government is a laggard. And make no mistake about it, they are searching for the answer.

With the Greats

It was this impatience with the blighting atmosphere of the political and social antiquarian that made Jefferson the foremost, as well as the n...t despised liberal of his generation; that drove Andrew Jackson along a course for which he was denounced as a vulgar ruffian; that inspired Abraham Lincoln toward a goal for which he was described as the earthly incarnation of coarse buffoonery; and for which Woodrow Wilson was cynically pictured as a dreamy professor bent on political and social experimentation.

Franklin Roosevelt finds himself in glorious companionship with these great spirits who spurned ... chariot of futility and negation.

Why was it essential that the powers of government be exerted in a new way on the daily life of the American people? Why is it impossible to tread the same old paths, no matter where they lead? Why had there been a complete breakdown in nearly every branch of public and private endeavor?

Because for 12 years—yea, 12 "long" years—the ancient doctrinaires of special privilege had stood at the pilot's wheel on our Ship of State. Because the powers of government had been exercised to promote the ends of injustice and bring a palsy to the efforts of the people exerted in their own behalf.

Pulled Some Hair

Because the streams intended for the unretarded flow of the people's energies were choked and we found it necessary here and there to cut a new and straighter channel instead of trying to clean out an old and crooked one.

Some of those who were rescued from drowning in the economic floodwater let loose by the previous 12 "long" years now complain because in lifting them out we were forced to pull their hair.

When the present administration assumed office on March 4, 1933, all classes of society bore the marks of such a combination of maladies that it is only possible to mention them in the vaguest outline.

These maladies were not local. They were not set off by states and bounds. They were not walled in by territorial barriers nor quarantined by yellow flags nailed to a tree.

They were maladies which took root deeply in the whole body of our social and economic fabric and were therefore chronic.

They had been fostered by enduring neglect, magnified by political folly, aggravated by venality and perpetuated by frantic effort to cure them by their causes.

No nation can prosper long or truly which finds no outlet for the products of its genius and labor.

Under Hoover

But in four years—yea, "four long years"—under the guidance of the man who was applauded but not re-nominated at Cleveland, we saw our trade with the world decline from 10 billions to three billions dollars per year, setting the feet of three million men upon the streets and turning their faces toward the lengthening bread-lines.

For 10 "long" years the condition of the American farmer had steadily declined in spite of the hectic flush of prosperity found on other portions of the economic body.

The farmer was losing not only his home, his toil, the rewards of his life and energy. He was losing faith in the ability or willingness of organized society through its only agency, government, to give him the same kind of break it had for generations given to others.

In the four years from 1928 to 1932 more banks had closed in failure than had ever closed before, and more than in all the rest of the world in the same length of time.

Led on by the sirens of speculative excess, and by the false signals flashed from the doors of the Treasury and the Executive Mansion, millions of men and women found themselves stunned by the falling debris of worthless securities foisted on them by investment pirates. They saw their substance drawn from their hands as if by some unseen magic force.

Toiling Children

Archaic and unethical methods of business competition obtained illegitimate profit regardless of peril and strangled smaller units of production and distribution.

Sweat shops, long hours, low wages, unwholesome working conditions and the physical and mental degradation of children remained the crowning infamy of portions of American industry.

Unemployment rolls never dreamed of by the accumulated pessimism of the century revealed between fifteen and sixteen million laborers in idleness.

"Three long years" of Republican superiority found local charity and relief everywhere collapsing, and millions of human beings were begging for bread, raiment and shelter, and uncounted numbers of them found aid only by the road-side, or upon park benches from which they crawled with the rising sun like dogs from a kennel.

"Three long years of normalcy" and they had wiped out half the values accumulated in this nation since Christopher Columbus, and half the total income of all the people of these United States.

"Three long years" and

We did not dare to breathe a prayer
Or to give our anguish scope,
Something was dead in each of us,
And what was dead was hope.

Then—Roosevelt!

Then came Franklin Roosevelt and assumed the heaviest burden that ever descended on any man since Washington knelt in the snow and Lincoln watched the Confederate flags across the Potomac. As his first act, he also knelt before an altar and prayed. As his second, he opened his breast to the raging storm and checked it in a day.

Where were his detractors then? They had sought refuge in the storm-cellar. They now cry "the republic is in peril. The republic is lost!" And, for all of them, it might have been.

There is not an American who does not know what happened then. Faith returned. Confidence revived. National courage rose like the sunt at dawn. Faces that for "three long years" had forgotten how to smile, brightened and looked up.

Americanism returned to America.

Need I remind you of that stroke of boldness which proclaimed the holiday of banks? Or the passage of the Emergency Banking Act? Or the Banking Act of 1935, which together restored not only banking but public confidence in banks?

Laws which withdrew banks from the feverish speculation of the stock market and made them banks again? Which strengthened their foundations and guaranteed their deposits and enticed from hiding places billions of dollars which had sought security in seclusion?

Landon's Record

And need I remind you that the Republicans who manipulated the Cleveland convention nominated a man for president who before the American Bankers' Association denounced the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, which guaranteed the deposits of the people throughout the United States, and as Governor of his state exerted every ounce of influence at his command to prevent the banks of Kansas from entering the guaranteed system?

And what I ask and the people have a right to know is whether some of those who journeyed to Washington in the days of their distress with a tin cup, a pair of blue glasses and a dog and obtained from the Treasury, through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, two and a quarter billion dollars of the people's money in order that they might live now propose to belittle their past predicament and those who rescued them from it and made it possible for the national banks alone to turn an annual loss of $150,000,000 to a net profit of more than $200,000,000.

During the four long years just prior to the Roosevelt administration, more than 7000 banks went out of business, and total deposits in all banks decreased by more than $15,000,000,000.

Saved the Banks

While under Mr. Hoover more than 7000 banks closed their doors permanently, only 264 state and national banks have closed since March 16, 1933, the end of the bank holiday, and only eight of them were national banks. Thus far, in the good year 1936, not a single national bank in the United States has closed its doors in the faces of the people.

Need I here recount the efforts of the great secretary of state, Mr. Cordell Hull, to pry ajar the gates of foreign trade and start again the movement of international commerce and good will?

Through the trade agreements authorized by Congress and consummated under that authority, our commerce with other nations has increased from 27 per cent of normal in March, 1933, to 58 per cent of normal in April, 1936; or from $2,953,000,000 in 1932 to $4,330,000,000 in 1935.

But in spite of this, we witnessed in the recent Republican convention a bitter denunciation of the power given to and exercised by the President as being wicked and unconstitutional in spite of the fact that from 1798 to 1935 Congress has, from time to time, conferred such authority on the President in the interest of American trade.

What do they offer as a substitute out of the depths of their own political and intellectual bankruptcy? Nothing more nor less than another stroke of commercial apoplexy in the clinic of Smoot and Hawley.

But we are told by the Republican battalion of death, and its illegitimate brother, the American Liberty League, that we are laying the hampering hand of government on the innocent heads of business and finance. These dismal prophets of panic and propaganda will continue to annoy the American people with their lamentations.

Fool's Paradise

What business are we outraging?

For 12 years—yea, for "12 long years"—the leaders of the Republican party dwelt in a fool's paradise and allowed the American people to pour billions of dollars into the sink-hole of fraudulent investment securities.

With blind and callous unconcern they sat smugly through the carnival until the mask was torn off and the public saw the putrid pestilence of financial debauchery which had blown into their nostrils an alien odor; and the result was the passage of the security and exchange acts for the protection of the people.

They sat in the folds of comfortable and luxurious upholstery while a giant system of holding companies was built one upon another in the public utility field, wringing exorbitant profits from investors, operating companies and consumers.

But did the leaders of old or new guards in Republicanism lash their faces into scarlet or their hearts into indignation over the spoliation of innocent people?

Among all the tethered and muzzled spokesmen of the doctrine of laissez faire no warning was uttered or relief proposed. From the lips of none who controlled or were chosen by the Cleveland convention came or has come either movement or utterance indicating either knowledge of the subject or ability or inclination to deal with.

The administration of Franklin Roosevelt found the spreading cancer and removed it.

What I ask and the people have a right to know is whether the Republican program contemplates the honest enforcement of the new enactments; whether those who shape that program will divorce themselves from whatever allegiance may have held them to these interests; or whether they propose to undo the work we have accomplished.

In 1920, 1924, 1928 and 1932 the hollow and hackneyed promise was made by Republican platforms and candidates to restore agriculture to economic equality with industry.

I have recalled these party pledges to remind you that by 1932 both political parties had recognized the agricultural problem not as local, but as national. Both parties advocated the control of production in order to prevent unsalable surpluses.

The difference was that the Democratic platform meant what it said and was immediately fulfilled when the opportunity came to us.

Poor Little Pigs

The Agricultural Adjustment Act was the fulfillment of this pledge to the farmers of the nation. Under this act, which was voluntary and not compulsory, the price of farm products were increased, sometimes doubled and trebled, and more than $2,000,000 was added to the annual income of agriculture.

It was because of this increase in farm income, and the opening of the facilities of financial credit to the farmer that he has been able to save more than three-quarters of a million homes, begin the payment of his debts, the repair of his houses and the purchase of things produced by others.

They have wept over the slaughter of a few little pigs as if they had been tender human infants nestling at their mothers' breasts. They have shed these tears over the premature death of pigs as if they had been born, educated and destined for the ministry or for politics.

But their bitterest tears are not shed over the fate of little pigs. Their real grief comes from the slaughter of the fat hogs of privilege and plunder which they have fed on the people's substance.

They are now weeping because we plowed under a few rows of cotton. Mr. Hoover started that. Their real terror springs from the fact that we have plowed under the sordid conception of old deal government and its chance ever to be restored to the control of American life.

But the people have been told that the foundations of national credit are sinking because of an unbalanced budget.

Now deficits and debts! Who began the deficits which have covered every year since 1930? Did the last Republican administration balance the budget? They merely juggled the estimates of revenue and expenditures. Spending little to retrieve disaster, they in-

MORE Radical New DEAL

ROOSEVELT MAY REPLY TO 'AL'

By KINGSBURY SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, June 24—A bid for the sympathy of the masses will be made by President Roosevelt in his acceptance speech in Philadelphia, Saturday night.

A promise to crusade in the cause of the many instead of the few was understood in quarters close to the White House as likely to be the central theme of the bill of goods the President will offer the nation as an inducement to his re-election.

He is certain of his renomination by the Democratic national convention and confident the platform will meet with his approval.

So today he was devoting his attention to drafting the speech in which he will make known his promises for the next four years.

More Radical

Indications were the trend of the speech would be considerably more radical than conservative, with a bid for the support of the masses on the grounds that the "New Deal" was fighting big business in the interests of the workers.

The President also was expected to assert that a Republican victory would mean a return to what the administration has termed the "old order," and to take the position that the real issue of the campaign is whether the nation is to go forward or backward.

A promise to exert this nation's moral influence in the cause of world peace and to maintain strict neutrality in foreign conflicts also was expected to figure in the President's speech.

Smith Reply?

A belief prevailed that the President also would reply to former Governor Alfred E. Smith and the other "wiking" conservative Democratic leaders who appealed to the convention to discard Mr. Roosevelt for a "genuine Democrat."

Meanwhile, the President was keeping in close touch by telephone with administration leaders at the convention as the resolutions committee whipped the platform into final shape.

STILL CALL NEW HAMPSHIRE 'HOME'

Colonel Knox and Wife Enjoy Needed Relaxation

Their voting residence may be in Chicago now, but Manchester, N. H., will always be "home" to Colonel Frank Knox, Republican vice-presidential nominee, and Mrs. Knox. The latter is shown here with her favorite saddle horse, ready for a canter along Manchester bridle paths. Riding remains an unfailing source of exercise and relaxation for Mrs. Knox as it is for her husband, a former Spanish War cavalryman.

This is vacation time for Vice-Presidential Candidate Frank Knox, but the bubbling energy of the former Rough Rider and World War artilleryman makes it hard for him completely to relax, even in the peaceful environment of his Manchester, N. H., summer home. This is a characteristic pose.

FIRST LADY TRIBUTE

Sec. Perkins Lauds Mrs. Roosevelt

Philadelphia, June 24 (AP)—The first Democratic women's "campaign breakfast" came to its collective feet cheering today when Secretary Frances Perkins named Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt as a factor in the November election.

The secretary of labor had finished her prepared speech on New Deal accomplishments. After a moment's hesitation, she asked permission to talk again. With feeling, she said:

"There is a woman Democrat who is not at this political convention because she is detained by the social conventions.

"But she has shown herself not bound by conventions these last few years. Recognizing her own particular genius, with people, that talent to love the human race, she has gone out through the length and breadth of the land, in the face of unfavorable criticism, not only to meet the people of the country personally as a friend, but to utilize that contact, and make herself a channel through which their needs, their hopes, their desires could be carried direct to places where solutions could be found to their problems.

"She has been gallant, courageous, intelligent and wise.

"Many women in this country when they vote for Franklin D. Roosevelt, will also be thinking with a choke in the throat of Eleanor Roosevelt!"

Col. Knox Rests In New England

Relaxing at his North Union street home, he made a few notes on what he expects to say to the 10,000 people expected to join New Hampshire's testimonial rally to him at the high school athletic field Friday night.

The occasion will mark Colonel Knox's first address since his nomination in Cleveland. Speaking from the same platform will be Governor H. Styles Bridges and former Senator George H. Moses.

Knox is here for a few weeks of golf, riding and rest in preparation for an intensive campaign during the late summer and fall.

With his partner, John A. Muehling, publisher of the Manchester Union, and Frederick W. Shontell, a business man, he is getting a daily work-out on the Manchester Country Club golf links.

Joy Riders Caught When Gas Fails

An empty gasoline tank stopped three joy-riding youngsters in a stolen automobile today, while they were outracing a police car at 70 miles an hour and eluding seven bullets, two of which lodged in the machine.

The boys, 14, 15 and 16, came down from Newburyport on a lark and, seeing an automobile, owned by George Cause, of Humboldt avenue, Roxbury, parked in downtown Boston, decided to go for a ride.

Travelling at a lively clip, they shot by Detectives John Tuscon, Harry Kershaw and J. J. McGovern patrolling Blue Hill avenue, Mattapan, in a police car.

They raced the officers four miles, but landed in police headquarters to await hearing in juvenile court when the gas gave out.

Hindenburg Skims By Provincetown

Provincetown, June 24—Capenders were given a spectacular view of the Hindenburg when she flew over Provincetown at 5:20 a.m. and headed to sea through a thick haze off the Peaked Hill Bars Coast Guard Station.

Spectators were amazed at the low altitude at which she was travelling over the harbor. She was no more than 100 feet up, it was estimated and the men at her controls were plainly in view. It was raining and stormy weather signals were up.

TODAY'S Boon-Doggle

Of sixteen "community service programs" approved for Denver, the Works Progress Administration press bure :: only bothered to announce the sponsor's contribution in one instance.

It is interesting to noté, however, that in that one case the contribution of $2740 by the sponsor proved sufficient to induce the federal treasury to proffer $496,482; and the sponsor's investment thus yielded a return of about 38120 per cent.

18-Year Term for Radio Note Plot

Hartford, Ct., June 24—William Wittels, 39, German airplane mechanic illegally in this country, today was sentenced here to 18 years in prison for using a letter written to radio's "Voice of Experience" to extort money from a local society girl.

The young woman, who was to have been his bride, permitted him to read the letter she had written. The man, threatening to make public the document, demanded $5000. He received $1300 in installments, and when his demands grew, the girl and her father sought the aid of police.

Asks Annulment

Salem, June 24—Mrs. Albadena H. Little, 34, today asked annulment of her marriage to Leroy C. Little, 51-year-old automobile salesman of Lynn, who, she charges, has another wife living in Topsham, Me.

BONUS FEES BARED

Schools Charge for Distribution

Charges that more than $800 in fees had been exacted from the postoffice for use of six Boston schoolhouses in distributing bonus bonds were made.

Acting Postmaster Peter F. Tague declared that as a result he had to cancel arrangements for continuation of this work in these buildings.

Protest has been lodged with Superintendent of Schools Patrick T. Campbell, Tague said.

The fees, it was said, were for custodians' and janitors overtime work and ranged from $1.50 an hour daily to $2.00 an hour Sundays and holidays.

It had been previously Tague's understanding that the school buildings could be used for the benefit of veterans without any cost, the postmaster said.

The schools used were the Charles Sumner, in Roslindale; the Henry L. Pierce, Dorchester center; Mary Curley, Jamaica Plain; Eliot, North End; John A. Andrews, South Boston, and Tileston school, Mattapan.

Al Smith Begins Annual Vacation

DOLAN Linked to 3 BROKERS

BONDS BOUGHT FROM THEM

Corporation counsel, prosecuting the City of Boston $250,000 civil suit against Edmund L. Dolan and six others, today charged that Dolan, while city treasurer, purchased bonds at excessive prices through three "dummy" brokerage firms.

Counsel George R. Farnum contended Dolan bought 80 per cent of the city's bonds through Legal Securities Corp.; R. L. Emerson Co., which succeeded the Legal Securities, and John F. Dever Co.

The city charges Dolan was the "invisible head" of these organizations and realized huge profits over a three-year period during his incumbency through the purchase of $10,000,000 worth of bonds.

A deposition secured by corporation counsel from Harry Law, vice-president of the City Company of New York, was read in court. The deposition revealed bond transactions with Legal Securities Company for the city, totalling some $300,000.

Thomas H. Mahony, chief of defense counsel for Dolan and six others, announced that the former city treasurer would take the stand as the first witness for the defense.

Cambridge Baby Burned In Crib

Despite efforts of a neighbor's children to rescue her, 18-months'-old Agnes May Smith suffered serious burns in a flaming crib at her home in Suffolk street, Cambridge, apartments today.

The fire, according to police, was started by the baby's brother, Fred Smith, Jr., aged 5, who was playing with matches, while their mother was out of the apartment.

Their screams alarmed Robert Cogswell, 11, who lives in the same house. He called Mrs. Elizabeth Ryan, next door neighbor.

Meanwhile, Chester Cogswell, 13, and his sisters, Florence, 9, and Audrey, 14, splashed water on the burning crib, and carried the baby out to Mrs. Ryan, who took it to Cambridge City Hospital.

Mid-Air Crash Kills 5 French Fliers

Cherbourg, June 24 (INS)—Two French navy hydroplanes crashed spectacularly in mid-air over Cherbourg Harbor today, and five persons, comprising all aboard the two craft, were killed.

The planes came together with terrific force and were almost totally wrecked before they plunged into the water.

The victims probably were killed instantly, according to rescuers who recovered the bodies.

Rotarians Elect Chief

creased the public debt by more than four billion dollars.

They did not tell you and will not tell you that during the creation of these deficits and unbalanced budgets there was no federal relief program and no public works program; that states and counties and cities threw this burden on the Federal doorstep not under Hoover but under Roosevelt.

3,500,000 Jobs

Those who seek to play miserable politics with human misery shout that these billions of dollars spent for relief and work have been poured out in reckless waste.

The Works Progress Administration has given employment to 3,500,000 people, 85 per cent of whom were taken from the relief rolls in the several states.

Shall we measure these values against a budget temporarily unbalanced?

But the theme song of our antagonists is the destruction of the nation's credit, and the wrapping of every new-born child in the swaddling clothes of debt.

When we entered the World War in 1917 our public debt was $2,000,000,000.

When we emerged from it in 1918 the public debt was $26,000,000,000.

By 1929 it had been reduced under sinking fund requirements passed in the Wilson administration to $17,000,000,000.

Under Republicans

From March, 1929, to March 4, 1933, that debt was increased to $21,000,000,000 without the inauguration of either a relief or public works program of any consequence whatever.

Hence, during the four long years of the Hoover administration, the public debt had been increased by $4,000,000,000.

From February 28, 1933, to the present time, the public debt has increased from $21,000,000,000 to approximately $31,500,000,000, an increase of $10,500,000,000

Out of this increase we have devoted 5 billions to relief and public works; 3 billions went to state and national banks, a part of which has been repaid. Out of it have been provided the funds for loans to railroads, insurance companies, industries, cities, counties and states; the refinancing of more than two million homes through the Farm Credit Administration and the Home Owner's Loan Corporation; the stimulation of housing under the Housing Administration; the establishment of more than 3800 Civilian Conservation Camps and the enrollment of more than 1,500,000 young men taken from idleness and taught the lessons of frugality and service in the economy of American manhood; the assistance of more than 600,000 farm families to re-establish their ability for self-support; benefit payments to the hundreds of thousands of farmers who cooperated with the government and whose contracts were fulfilled notwithstanding the decision of the Supreme Court; and all the other emergency activities made necessary to escape the blight of the last four years of the Republican regime.

Tax Increases

We have increased taxes. So did the last Republican administration. They increased them on consumers.

We have adjusted our new taxes according to the ability of the taxpayer to pay. We have increased values and profits out of which taxes are paid; but the increase in taxes has not kept pace with the increase in income from land values which the policies of the Roosevelt administration have produced.

We shall balance the budget. We shall balance the books in the treasury. We shall soon ordain that no discrepancy between income and outgo shall exist. But we shall not do it at the expense of human life nor to the degradation of the spirit and morale of our people.

But we are told by the smug and cynical apostles of the status quo that the Supreme Court has nullified some of the acts of this administration. And while anxious farmers ponder their fate, the laboring men scan the heavens for a rainbow of hope, and women and children look in vain for the preservation of their lives and health, a voice from the grave at Palo Alto shouts, "Thank God for the Supreme Court."

I make no attack on the Supreme Court. As an institution I respect it, and I would be both unfair and unjust if I were unwilling to accord to judges on the bench the right to their views of law and constitutions which I claim for myself.

But there is nothing new in controversies over the Constitution. They began in the convention which framed it, and ten amendments were adopted to it by the first Congress that assembled under it.

If in the future further amendment should become necessary to enable the people to work out their destiny and protect their fundamental rights, or to overcome some archaic interpretation never intended by its framers, I doubt not that the people will face that duty with the same calm intelligence which has guided them in the past.

But from the exultant voices of the tree-sitters and the devotees of the hitching post you would imagine that the Supreme Court had never nullified an act of Congress until Franklin D. Roosevelt became President of the United States.

During the existence of this nation more than 25,000 laws have been enacted by Congress. About 67 of the whole number have been nullified by the Supreme Court, and most of them within the past 50 years.

From 1920 to 1930 21 acts were declared null and void. But did any of these decisions strike terror into the hearts of the Old Guard and the Old Dealers? Did anybody don sack-cloth and ashes and pray to heaven to deliver the people from the clutches of an irresponsible government?

Bu when some three or four outstanding acts, conceived and consummated in behalf of labor, or agriculture and the honest conduct of business and designed to constitute this as a government of equal rights, are cast aside by the rigors of technicality and the application of antiquated economic predilections in the interpretation of the document, as indicated by one of the great dissenters, we are asked to condemn the legislature and executive as attempting to inject some alien concept into the fiber of our institutions.

We have sought to serve the American people under the Constitution. We have thought that under its broad and generous outlines we might rescue the people from national disaster. We have sought to treat it as a life-giving charter, rather than an object of curiosity on the shelf of a museum.

Nine Can't Agree

We shall abide by its decisions and seek to shape our program in accordance with them.

But when nine eminent men on the highest court cannot agree on what the Constitution means, is it any wonder that 531 members of the United States Congress find difficulty in agreeing about it?

And when five of those eminent men say a law violates the Constitution, and four of them, equally eminent, learned and sincere and equally alive to the compulsions of modern life, say it does not violate the Constitution, then we are at least relieved of any obligation to underwrite the infallibility of the five whose views prevail.

Is the court beyond criticism? May it be regarded as too sacred to be disagreed with?

Thomas Jefferson did not think so.

Andrew Jackson did not think so.

Theodore Roosevelt did not think so. Speaking to the Colorado Legislature in 1910, with reference to two recent decisions of the Supreme Court, he said:

"If such decisions as these two indicated the court's permanent attitude, there would be really a grave cause for alarm, for such decisions, if consistently followed up, would upset the whole system of popular government."

"T. R." for Recall

Governor Landon and Colonel Knox fall upon each other's necks with hallowed reunion because they rode the Bull Moose behind Theodore Roosevelt in 1912. In that fight Theodore Roosevelt had little regard for the court's decisions that he advocated their "recall" by the vote of the people.

These judges have decided that under the Constitution the Federal Government cannot lift men, women and children out of the degradation of unconscionable hours, wages or working conditions, because it invades the rights of the states. They have decided that the states cannot do it because it invades the rights of private property. I presume this progressive and logical course will soon lead us to the conclusion that private property cannot do it, because it violates the law of gravitation.

What we need is a new definition and a new interpretation of interstate commerce. Every article that is grown or mined or fabricated in one state and destined for another by whatever means of transportation is an object of interstate commerce. It is in competition with every other similar article originated in or destined for other states. Commerce, like water, seeks its own level. Like the wind, it goeth where it listeth; and you can no more divide this nation into 48 air-tight and water-tight economic compartments than you can parcel off the heavens to control the winds or the rains.

What Liberty Gone?

Over against the hosannas of Hoover for the tortured interpretation of the Constitution I place the tortured souls and bodies of men who work and pray, of women whose God-given right is not fulfilled in a sweat-shop, and of children whom we have sought to restore to the schoolroom and the playground. One day all these will thank God for Franklin Roosevelt.

But we were told at Cleveland and will be told until November that we have taken away the liberties of the people; that we have bound them in chains, and that they are fettered in the dungeons of moral and economic slavery.

What is this freedom which we have crucified? This liberty we have slain?

Is it the freedom of workers to free collective bargaining? Is it the freedom of farmers to escape the loathsome peonage imposed on them by land and production agreements? Is it the freedom of investors to circumvent the secret devices of stock manipulators?

Is it the freedom of bank depositors from the fear of loss of their savings? Is it the freedom of home owners and home lovers to prortect and preserve their firesides?

Back of Hoover's cry for freedom at Cleveland stood the immemorial pawn-brokers of the Republican Party who about with glee that they have experienced a counterfeit conversion. Back of him stood the Republican Party's holding company, the American Liberty League, which, if it had existed in 1776 as now officered and manned, would have been against the Declaration of Independence, the Revolutionary War and the Constitution of the United States.

Back of him stood every interest which seeks to coin the flesh and blood of human beings into profits; every stock-jobber, every monopolist of privilege and power; every propagandist for the discredited and defunct alliance between politics and gelf. Back of him stood the sinister figure of William Ranodiph Hearst, whose twin discoveries constitute the Republican ticket nominated at Cleveland.

Yes, we have destroyed a certain type of liberty in this country.

We have destroyed the liberty of small groups to pick the pockets of the American people; the liberty of organized greed to pervert the agencies of government to their own enrichment; the liberty of great financial wizards to engulf this nation in the flood-waters of frenzied speculation; the liberty of smug groups of self-satisfied parasites to pull the strings of puppet sattelites in official positions in Washington under the guise of popular government; the liberty of long pampered interests to use the forms of law to fasten their teeth in the vitals of American economic life; the liberty of power and utility combinations to strangle while they rob alike investors and consumers; the liberty of organized crime to flaunt its black flags in the face of state and federal statutes; and we have destroyed the liberty of any powerful or selfish group anywhere in this nation to claim that the capital of the United States is located anywhere on this continent except in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia.

Cites Deeds

Who are those who raise their strident voices against the objectives of the New Deal?

Not the American farmer, whose increased income under it has lifted him out of the economic basement.

Not the American home owner, who still dwells under his own roof and asks a heavenly benediction upon it.

Not the laboring man, whose long hours have been shortened and his rewards increased. Not the worker whom we have rescued from the status of a wandering mendicant.

Not the honest investor for whom we have provided information and protection. Not the worker whom we have rescued from the status of a wandering mendicant.

Not the honest investor for whom we have provided information and protection. Not the working woman, whose tender and immortal functions, over the dead body of monstrous greed, we have sought to save and beautify.

But, my friends, we have done more than increase the price of agriculture and crops. We have done more than relieve unemployment. We have done more than preserve the homes of the nation.

But there are human values far beyond these figures. The important point is not merely that farm prices have increased, but that American agriculture has been rescued from impending ruin.

It is not merely that the condition of labor has been improved by the reduction of the number of unemployed from 15 millions to 10 millions of workers, but that labor has been dragged back from the brink of peonage and that, with one-fourth of our population destitute, their health, comfort and self-respect have been maintained, and there has been no sedition, riot or bloodshed during the worst human catastrophe in our history.

Money Sound

These are the moral and spiritual contributions we have made to the life of our people which are beyond computation by the standards of the dollar.

We talk of the gold standard, the gold content of the dollar, and men who do not know the history or the significance of money talk about the gold dollar and the so-called return to gold, denying the obvious truth that the American dollar, with a larger reserve of gold behind it today than ever before, is the soundest medium of exchange among all the nations of the world today.

But I am thinking of those immortal reserves of character which partake of the essence of the heart and soul of a nation which have been strengthened and perpetuated by what we have been trying to do.

I am thinking that while we have preserved homes and acres and railroads and banks and insurance companies and factories and all the tangible and corporal symbols of the people's wealth, we have also preserved the intangible and immeasurable values that take form in the realms of pride and service and honor.

We have preserved and stimulated respect for law and the rights of the average man.

We have increased the loyalty of the people to the government which should be their servant.

We have restored the faith from which must spring the defenders of the flag and of the Constitution.

We have cultivated a study of the science of government and its treat functions among millions to whom government was something apart and detached and without meaning.

We have renewed and re-enforced the belief that after all government and trusted leaders may hear and heed the cry of the humblest worshipper at the shrine of equality.

We have revitalized the answer to the question which has rung through all the ages "Am I my brother's keeper?"

We have sought to confound the cynics who despise the moral conceptions of the more abundant life for which the Master lived and died.

We have under the leadership of a man of rare and superb courage endeavored not to tear down what others have legitimately constructed, not to destroy the material rewards of honest toil of mind or body, but to establish a fairer, juster order that will give to every man, woman and child in this republic the right to stand erect in pride and self-respect, to see the stars on high and share the glory of the sun.

We meet here within the shadow of Liberty Hall, in this city of brotherly love, in the state of William Penn, where eight score years ago Thomas Jefferson gave to the world an unfamiliar creed of human freedom. It was here that he became the spokesman of the drawers of water and the hewers of wood. It was here that the foundations of our faith were laid.

It is here again, in the mist of these historic scenes, that we invoke the spirits of departed patriots, rekindle our belief in the nobility of their cause, and rededicate ourselves to its complete fulfilment.

It is here, with such a leadership, in such a cause, with such a record, that we accept the challenge and hasten our feet to the field of battle.

May I conclude with this quotation:

"No greater thing could come to our land today than a revival of the spirit of religion—a revival that would sweep through the homes of the nation and stir the hearts of men and women of all faiths to a realization of their belief in God and their dedication to His will for themselves and for their world. I doubt if there is any problem—social, political or economic—that would not melt before the fire of such a spiritual awakening."

The American people are not afraid to follow, they will follow the man who spoke those words. He is the present and the next President of the United States, Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

June 24, 1932, Coldest Ever

If you are dismayed at today's wet and cool weather, you may find some satisfaction in the fact that in 1932 the coldest June 24 was recorded, 46 degrees, whereas today the temperature is 56 degrees.

The weatherman, however, promises warmer and drier weather tomorrow.

The hottest day for this date was in 1925, when the mercury rose to 94.

'DEM. PAYOFF COMING,' SAYS THE SENATOR

If you are attempting to pass it off in the Democratic donkey there are already sufficient of the same on two legs cluttering up the joint."

"Timmy," says the Senator, "in case you are mixed up on the identities, I am a little HORSE from cheering the keynote speech and this is a little goat which the Massachusetts boys have lost down here and I am holding it for them. What have you got for breakfast for the goat because the goat is nearly famished?"

"Senator," says Timmy, "the goat looks like he had a harder night than you, and if you will inform me how the Massachusetts boys happen to lose their goat, I will permit him to gnaw on the blind robin from the free lunch."

With this Timmy fishes the lone petrified occupant of the pickled herring jar out on the bar, and the goat that the Senator is with takes a small nibble of the same, settling slowly to the floor by the stern. While the goat is nibbling on the blind robin, and the blind robin is growling at the goat, the Senator goes on as follows:

"Timmy," says the Senator, "there are two reasons why the Massachusetts boys lose their goat and I will tell you both of them. The first of these reasons is that they have endorsed a gentleman by the name of Philip Philbin to be their lieutenant-governor back home, and it is just today that they decided possibly a small error has been made.

"I do not know what it is that decided them, but Senator Dave Walsh arrives from Washington a short time before this decision is being whispered.

"From what I am able to gather it does not appear that Senator Dave Walsh was the enthusiastic supporter of Philip Philbin which many of those who voted for Philip at Springfield were led to believe.

"Senator Dave Walsh thinks Philbin is a very nice guy, indeed, but there is considerable doubt that Philbin has the hearty backing of Senator Dave Walsh, or any backing at all.

"There is much discussion of how long Philip Philbin has been registered out of New York State and what he may be expected to do in a contest against Leverett Saltonstall.

"Already there is a large and hearty sentiment among those present to prevail upon Philip Philbin to withdraw from the contest. Those saying aye desire to draft Corrections Commissioner Arthur T. Lyman of Westwood, the no-politician career man of the Democrats, as being the only one having a chance against Leverett Saltonstall.

"Since the Republican shotgun harmony convention at Springfield last week came up with such a well balanced slate, there has been a general weeping among the Democrats that they did not do a little balancing themselves by chosing Mr. Arthur T. Lyman of Westwood.

"The Massachusetts boys fear somebody has outfoxed them with Mr. Philip Philbin and this is one reason why they have lost their goat."

It is at this point that the goat which the senator is with sinks slowly by the bow on account of him having a touch-and-go match with the blind robin which has never been in a tussel with a goat before but is giving a very nice account of himself, indeed.

"Senator," says Timmy, "this is a very nice go between the goat and the blind robin and in a minute the goat will be giving the blind robin the butt with his tin ear. What is the other reason that you are caring for the same?"

"Timmy," says The Senator, "the second reason that the Massachusetts boys have lost their goat is on account of a lady by the name of Masie Quinn who is a sister of the Lieutenant-Governor of Rhode Island and should have attended this Cleveland convention, but came here by mistake.

"Because what does Miss Masie Quinn state in a public announcement but President Roosevelt will take a heavy varnishing in all New England, especially Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Maine, when the votes are counted in November.

"This is a very unhappy statement to be made by a Democratic lady at a Democratic convention and gives much grief to the Massachusetts boys who prefer that they should speak for themselves.

"This feeling, expressed by Joe McGrath, Tom Buckley, Mrs. Margaret O'Riordan and others of the Massachusetts delegation, is heartily endorsed by Miss Mary M. Dewson, the prominent Democrat from Maine.

"Timmy, I have always contended that the ladies should stick to the beauty contests at the conventions like Miss Edwina Strong, the nice little girl from Revere who is here with her mother and does not have anything to say about any contest except that to decide which is the best looking girl from the 48 states."

It is at this point that there is a loud thumping on the floor in front of the bar and it is obvious to all present that the blind robin is giving the goat a large run for his money because the blind robin is clutching with great strength onto the goat's whisker.

"Senator," says Timmy, "the goat not only acts as a counter irritant to the flies but he provides the entertainment. I will give even money he does not beat the blind robin in a fair go."

"Timmy," says The Senator, "I am just looking after the goat temporary. I am not managing him. When Bill Saxe is finished with his important mission, I am letting Bill Saxe take over the stewardship of the goat.

"As soon as it comes up cloudy, where does Bill Saxe go but out to Franklin Field flying his kite. A large delegation of those are out there with Bill Saxe helping to fly this kite which is booming the candidacy of Governor Jim for vice-president.

"When Governor Jim arrives tomorrow he will be greeted by a large band and more cheering than Garner will get.

"Of course, there are many who laugh at Ben Franklin while Ben Franklin is flying his kite and there are some who scoff at Bill Saxe while Bill Saxe is flying his kite, but Timmy, the key that is hanging on the kite string that Bill Saxe is hanging on would open the portals of a very beautiful vista. All he needs is the lightning.

"Maybe the threatening clouds are only a little June shower coming up and if this is so the kite flying does not work any harm, anyhow, but is all to the good for Governor Jim's candidacy for senator."

It is at this point that the blind robin begins to sing his roundelay and all present can see that the blind robin is getting the upper hand of the goat because while the goat has dined on chair legs, convention gavels, badges and broken pint bottles he has never in all his life encountered a blind robin before.

"Senator," says Timmy, "whether this is a goat as you say, or if he is a donkey with tin ears as you say not, I will give you two to one the blind robin makes him cry Uncle."

"Timmy," says The Senator, "the blind robin may make him cry, but he will never cry Uncle because he does not have any relatives. I thought you were giving the goat something to eat, not something to eat the goat. If you will take your mind off the match I will give you the news of the gathering, including the arrival of John Curley.

"Alabama is still casting its votes for Underwood and Senator McAdoo is still leading the California parade in a kind of Carioca step, so it is still a Democratic National Convention.

"They only play 'The Sidewalks of New York' once because they are being used for the walking delegates, but the theme song is 'Happy Days Are Here Again' like it was four years ago.

"They are still trying to convince the delegates and the delegate are still trying to learn the words.

"Be only rule about singing the song is that the delegates must be left at the post by the band come fast in the back streets, take command on the far turn and finish three lengths ahead.

"Th payoff window is five months straight ahead.

"Thr are not selling any of the nominator tickets here, but you gt stuck 16 cents for a carnation pinned in your button while ging in and 50 cents for a gilded n half-dollar on the way out.

"Fifte cents of the carnation money goe to the convention and onecent is for putting the pin on ou. The gilded tin half dollar is the front part of a donkey s one side and a view of an ephant going away on the othe.

"Proceed from this investment are reprented as going to the young Democrats and should make a tee fund for them to grow old a.

"Everybo is very pleased with Philadelphia as a convention city and Mayor Wilson, as a good Republican, attained the ultimate in hospital gestures by ordering a nighsession of the court for the coenience of visitors who are ansted and have the bail money i hand.

"The ideal having a convention informion booth on every street corne is tops with the delegates. I get a little time inquiring at lese places as to which is thmost popular information the legates are seeking to be informe of and the questions most often asked are as follows:

"1—Which hotel is Mr. Farley staying at?'

"2—Where is the nearest package store?'

"3—When do they ring the bell with the crack in it?'

"Once in a while, Timmy, a delegate will go up to an information booth with an embarrassing question like what the platform is going to contain to off-set the Lemke third party and the only answer you get is something like three blocks and turn to the left.

"Well, Timmy, the keynoter is very nice to listen to, though personally I will take Joe Mulhern, but the demonstrometer known as the roar recorder showed that Herbert Hoover's speech at Cleveland gets more cheers than mention of President Roosevelt's name. So far it looks like the Democrats will nominate Hoover."

It is just at this point that there is a kind of gasping sound from the goat which The Senator is keeping for the Massachusetts boys and all gather around to see the finish of the struggle.

"Senator," says Timmy, "I do not know if he is bleating or braying but if he can bray he better bray hard and fast because he is swallowing the blind robin and the blind robin is swallowing his whiskers. I guess that makes it no-contest."

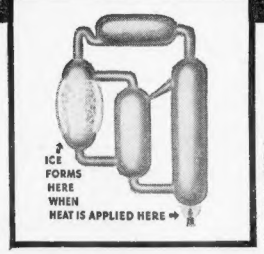
YOU KNOW ELECTROLUX IS DIFFERENT THE MINUTE YOU NOTICE ITS SILENCE!

And here's something important to remember: the reason for this silence—a basically different operating method—is the reason for many other exclusive advantages, too!



HERE'S HOW SIMPLE ELECTROLUX IS! This simplified diagram shows at a glance why Electrolux has no moving parts and needs none. Remember—parts that do not move cannot wear. This means more satisfaction—and longer years of service!

IT'S HARD for anyone to imagine a refrigerator that works in complete silence. Even after you have seen Electrolux and listened to it, this silence still seems a miracle.

Actually it is even more important than it seems . . . for the basically different operating method behind this silence is the reason for the other exclusive advantages that make Electrolux superior to other good refrigerators.

This operating method is simplicity itself. A tiny gas flame circulates a simple refrigerant. By being alternately heated and cooled, this refrigerant freezes ice cubes and keeps the food compartment at a constant low temperature. There is no need for moving parts—no need for force—or friction—or noise.

You can put this simplicity down in terms of dollars and cents saved. Saved on depreciation. Saved on food bills. Saved on running cost.

And these are real savings—if you will take other owners' word for it. Many write to tell us they have saved enough to actually pay for their Electrolux over a reasonable period.

But see this miracle refrigerator yourself, at your local gas company or gas appliance dealer. Ask questions about it. The more you learn about it—the more you'll understand why an army of satisfied owners have started a national trend toward Electrolux. It offers you more. Terms are exceedingly liberal. Less than 15¢ a day brings you all the joys and savings of Electrolux—the modern gas refrigerator.

CURLEY MAY ANSWER SMITH, ELY ON CONVENTION FLOOR

setts governor as the original Roosevelt man in New England, his contacts made while stumping the West in the 1932 campaign, his dynamic personality and oratorical ability, gave impetus to a widespread demand for his appearance before the convention in some special capacity.

BOOM PERSISTS

Chairman James A. Farley of the Democratic national committee is understood to be using his influence to give Governor Curley the honor of being one of the President's seconders.

The Curley boom for nomination as vice-president persists in spite of Farley's praise of Vice-President John N. Garner of Texas in his opening address to the convention.

The Farley reference to the Vice-President is interpreted to mean that President Roosevelt is satisfied to have the Texan again as a running mate.

RECEPTION PLANNED

Arrangements for a rousing reception to Governor Curley upon his arrival in Philadelphia are arranged. They call for a band and an escort for him to the Adelphia Hotel, headquarters of the Massachusetts delegation.

In addition to support for the governor coming from prominent Legionnaires, labor leaders, mindful of the praise heaped upon Curley by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor for the many liberal labor laws passed by the Massachusetts Legislature during Curley's administration on Beacon Hill, are going out of their way to say nice things about Governor Curley.

There is also strength gaining for the governor from those who applauded his recent ousting of Alexander Lincoln from the state tax appeal board, and from the strategists seeking to nullify the effects of the third party threat of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin.

They argue that nomination of Governor Curley would do much to offset the backing given Thomas O'Brien for the vice-presidency in the third party movement, who is closely identified with railroad union groups.

Several delegates in the Utah contingent, who met the governor when he was returning from his Western speaking tour for Roosevelt in 1932, are among those who are expressing strong admiration for him.

Among these are A. S. Brown and O. W. Ewing of Salt Lake City. They recalled with pleasure that when the governor visited the Mormon Church, the organist played several Irish selections on the great temple organ.

One or two delegates even from Texas, home state of Vice-President Garner, expressed interest in the momentum which the Curley movement has attained.

WALSH IS GREETED

Senator David I. Walsh, recently elevated to the chairmanship of the important Naval Affairs Committee of the Senate, was visited by numerous influential Democrats as he took his place among the Massachusetts delegation.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Attorney-General Gomer Cummings and Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson were among the first to greet the Bay State senior senator.

James Roosevelt was also the center of some attention. All that remains to crown this exceptional interest in the Massachusetts group is the appearance of Governor Curley.

URGES MERIT SYSTEM

Mrs. Larue Brown of Boston, wife of one of President Roosevelt's Harvard classmates, and a director of the National League of Woman Voters, appeared before the resolutions committee and advocated a plank to substitute the merit system in civil service appointments for the spoils system.

Walter L. McMeniman, formerly of Cambridge, now of Chicago, is renewing old acquaintances in the Massachusetts delegation. He is special assistant of the Pullman Company, a former legislative representative of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and an ex-member of the United States Labor Board. He is being tendered a dinner tonight at the Adelphia Hotel by President A. F. Whitney of the Brotherhood of aRilroad Trainmen.

Charles H. McGlue, chairman of the state ballot law commission, will speak at 11:30 o'clock tonight over a radio hookup of 12 stations, of which WMEX is one. McGlue will discuss the convention.

"We'll keep crowing for the new deal and Roosevelt, Rhode Island Red."

G. O. P. SOLID, HE SAYS

Senator Walsh, in answer to questions, declared the nomination of Landon and Knox by Republicans has undoubtedly solidified the G. O. P.

"I still feel confident that the administration will be returned, but it will not be the walkover that was expected three or four months ago," he said.

He was of the opinion that the coming election will result in a diminution in the Democratic strength in the House.

Walsh is in entire agreement with the views of the Massachusetts delegation, earlier expressed, that the surest and wisest course for the convention to pursue is to leave the two-thirds nomination rule alone.

"Ladies and Gentlemen — the Champion!"

JAMES A. FARLEY — JAMES ROOSEVELT

Meet the "champeen," folks! Jim the President's son introduces Jim, the all-'round Democratic big shot. There's no need, of course, for a formal presentation. For everybody knows James Roosevelt and Democratic National Chairman James A. Farley—even in the excitement and hurly-burly of fast moving events on the floor of the convention hall at Philadelphia! It's an informal pose. Facial expressions tell the story.

DOG RACE TAX BOOST ASKED

The ex-mayor's letter read:

"His Excellency, James M. Curley,

State House, Boston, Mass.

Dear Governor Curley:

"It would be a shame to permit the legislature to adjourn without another attempt to secure an adequate share of the dog tracks' receipts for the public treasury.

"I was present in the Senate the other day when your proposal to increase the dog tax from 3½ to 5 per cent was voted upon, and the conduct of the Senate members made a scandalous page in the public life of Massachusetts.

"Though almost a full membership was present, a rollcall was refused—a most cowardly act.

SHAMED WITNESS

"As a shamed witness of this proceeding, I respectfully request that you send a special message to the Legislature at once, asking for the passage of a measure making the tax on dog track receipts the same as on horse track receipts. This, I am told, will bring to the public treasury an addition of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

"To vote to continue the additional 1 per cent tax on gasoline, which affects motor trucks as well as passenger vehicles; to levy an additional 10 per cent on incomes, affecting the holder of a few shares as well as the large holder; and to refuse to increase the dog tax from 3½ to 5 per cent is unbelievable, if it were not true.

"I therefore ask you to send another message to the Legislature not for an increase from 3½ to 5 per cent, but for the same tax on dog racing as paid on horse racing receipts.

WOULD FEED HUNGRY

"This amount will feed thousands of hungry families and not prevent fat profits to the few who control the dog franchises.

"This year I expect to campaign throughout the state, as I have campaigned or 45 years, for the Democratic national and state ticket.

"It will be a considerable embarrassment for myself and others to face huge audiences and be compelled to admit that, with a Democratic Governor in office at the State House and the Senate about evenly divided, a roll call could not be obtained on a bill which deprives the treasury of the Commonwealth of hundreds of thousands of dollars, which money will go into the pockets, I am told, of fewer than a dozen people.

"Very truly yours,

JOHN F. FITZGERALD.

LEHMAN HALTS DRAFT MOVE

Philadelphia, June 24 (INS)—Governor Herbert H. Lehman of New York has told Democratic leaders, it was learned today, that he will make no announcement concerning a possible change in his plan to retire at the end of this year until he returns to Albany.

The governor has definitely blocked a movement to draft him for a third term in the dramatic setting of the national convention.

Landon Sees Bacon On Eve of Vacation

By ROBERT HUMPHREYS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Topeka, Kans., June 24—Governor Alfred M. Landon, the G. O. P. presidential nominee, will leave here tonight for Estes Park, Colo., for a 10-day vacation prior to opening the 1936 Republican campaign.

Before his departure, the Kansas governor was scheduled to confer today with Gaspar G. Bacon, former lieutenant-governor of Massachusetts. Bacon, an original Landon supporter in the Bay State and one of those who seconded the Governor's nomination at Cleveland, arrived here last night from Boston.

The Governor will be accompanied by Mrs. Landon, their children, Nancy Jo, 3; John Cobb, 2; Mrs. Samuel Cobb, mother of Mrs. Landon, and the Governor's daughter, Peggy Anne Landon.

WILL STAY ON RANCH

A secretarial staff will follow Landon and the nominee's campaign aides, Charles P. Taft, Ralph West Robey, E. H. Taylor and E. D. Enfield, will join the Governor next week.

The Landons will stay at the McGraw Ranch, 6 miles from Estes Park, which they have leased for the Summer. With his family scheduled to remain at the ranch, the Governor will return to Topeka July 6, on the eve of a special session of the Kansas State Legislature. Two weeks later on July 23, he is to be formally notified of his presidential nomination in traditional ceremonies.

PLANS TO FISH

Although he hopes to fish, hunt and ride on his vacation, the Governor intends to complete his message to the legislature and shape the first draft of his acceptance speech during his stay in Colorado.

Except for his family, newspapermen and his press "contact" man, E. Rose Bartley, the Governor will travel alone when he entrains tonight. At Watkins, Colo., early tomorrow morning, the train will be boarded by former United States Senator Lawrence Phipps, G. O. P. national committeeman from Colorado, and Wilbur Denius, Republican state chairman. The nominee said he had urged Colorado party leaders not to attempt any public receptions enroute.

Voters Changing To Union Party

Followers of Father Charles E. Coughlin are rapidly having their names removed from the enrollment lists of the two major parties, reports from various cities and towns showed today.

A majority of those withdrawing their party allegiance are Democrats, according to city and town clerks and election commissioners.

All are asking that the party designation after their names be dropped because they wish to be considered independents, in view of the formation of a third party, the Union Party, with Father Coughlin's support.

At the office of the Brookline town clerk, 55 persons have had the change made this week, while one voter switched his allegiance from the Democratic to the Republican party. Boston, Quincy and several other communities also reported large switches.

Kessaris Gets Writ In Tax Fight

Salem, June 24—Thomas Kessaris, Peabody chain store operator who preferred to languish in jail here rather than pay a 1932 tax bill of $14.90 on his limousine, was released today on a writ of habeas corpus secured through the Supreme Court by his attorney, William F. Regan.

eKssaris refused to pay the tax on the grounds that Tax Collector Joseph Hayes "had employed Boston comic" ins to terrorize him while residents of Peabody remained unemployed."

The candy man announced, when jailed yesterday:

"I'll sit in jail here until Doom's Day before I'll pay any money to out-of-town constables."

A hearing will be held Friday to determine the legality of the arrest of eKssaris by Boston constables.

TOWNSEND AND HIGHEST COURT FIGHTS LOOM

Convention Hall, Philadelphia, June 24 (AP)—Platform troubles over the Constitution and the Townsend plan rose to plague the Democrats today as they made a "breathing spell" of the third convention session.

Among proposals pyramided before the platform committee were suggested constitutional amendments, one to fortify federal powers and another to require a two-thirds vote of the Supreme Court to kill any law.

Neither was given much chance for survival; but the proceedings were pitched to an emphasis that Supreme Court judgments are not necessarily infallible or final. By roaring approval to the keynote by Senator Alben W. Barkley last night, the delegates roused expectations that even more militant defenses of New Deal enactment—whatever this Supreme Court might say—were on the way.

MORE PAY, LESS WORK

Following the formal setting up of committees this afternoon, the convention itself arranged a recess to let the platform-makers and those in charge of the dispute over repeal of the two-thirds nominating rule to get to work in private. The great majority welcomed a chance to get a "second wind" after the outbursts in favor of President Roosevelt and in defiance of his opposition yesterday.

Platform deliberations started off harmoniously enough with the unanimous election of Senator Robert Wagner, New York, to the chairmanship. Among his difficulties that approached settlement as brief public hearings began were the labor and farm planks.

On the first, the prospect was for strong collective bargaining guarantee, endorsement of higher wages and shorter hours and a pledge to implement the social security Act where advisable. A short-range, generalized statement of policy apparently was ahead for agriculture.

'HONEST DOLLAR' PLEA

A ten-point program asked by the National Grange included continued subsidies, price parity for farmers, and "an honest dollar." The very volume of petitions showed the task ahead if the administration objective of a brief platform was to be realized.

The Washington state delegation provided the spearhead for the drive on behalf of monthly pensions of $200 for the aged. Since there appeared little likelihood of an attempt in committee to win over the Townsendites completely, leaders resigned themselves to a floor argument.

It did not take long for them to find that advocacy of any constitutional amendment would precipitate a party-rocking debate. Some members of Congress up for re-election had argued against trying to widen federal authority, as well as against the attempt by the American Federation of Labor to have a five to four decision outlawed. The platform was expected to reach the floor by tomorrow night.

Lemke Leaves for Fr. Coughlin Talk

Washington, June 24 (INS)—Representative William Lemke of Fargo, N. D., the Union Party's candidate for President, left Washington today by automobile with his two sons for Chicago where he will establish national campaign headquarters.

He will be in Detroit Friday to confer with the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, the radio priest who heads the Union for Social Justice.

President's Mother, 81, To Attend

Hyde Park, N. Y., June 24 (AP)—Mrs. James Roosevelt, 81-year-old mother of the President, is staying close to the radio in the library of her Hyde Park home this week, following the proceedings of the Democratic national convention.

She will go to Philadelphia by automobile Saturday to attend the closing sessions, and will be present at the notification ceremony.

FRENCH REDS SEIZE SHIPS

culminated a debate following exposition of the new Leftist government's foreign policy during which France served notice on the powers she will demand permanent international control of war industries.

The strike at the huge Saint Nazaire naval works was called late this afternoon.

The naval strikers immediately boarded and occupied the cruisers Leygues and Marseillaise. It marked the first time the French navy was directly affected by the country's strike emergency.

At the Penhoet shipyards in Saint Nazaire 5000 workers, engaged in construction of the nation's new 35,000-ton battleship Strassbourg, were expected to join the strike momentarily.

Afflicted with a growing internal "war of the flags," France will seek a lasting external peace by means of continued adherence to the League of Nations and League regulation of the manufacture of munitions, Socialist Foreign Secretary Yvon Delbos declared in the Chamber of Deputies.

Formally announcing France's decision to follow Britain's lead in abolishing the sanctions against Italy, the foreign secretary's statement was the first comprehensive public disclosure of the foreign policy of the radical popular front government that came into power early this month.

As Delbos spoke on foreign affairs, the domestic crisis took on a grave appearance as 9000 striking seamen and dockworkers in Marseilles having established virtual "soviets" aboard the 68 ships they are occupying.

urley's Liquor Tax Veto Stands

Governor Curley's veto of a bill exempting liquor tax revenue stood today. The House of Representatives declined to override it. The bill would give cities and towns $3,200,000 to help finance old age assistance, while Curley wants the money placed in the general fund.

MAINE PATRIOTS IN DRIVE TO SMASH 'REDS'

By LUTHER CONANT, JR.
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Portland, Me., June 24—A "committee of 100" gathered its strength here today for the most intensive investigation into the menace of Communism and other subversive movements ever inaugurated in the history of Maine.

The committee is composed of leading officials from almost every patriotic organization in the state.

Governor Louis J. Brann has announced that the petition of the group, calling for an inquiry of all "night riders, black or red," will have his immediate attention.

"I will see to it," he said, "that there is a thorough investigation of all subversive activity in the state, whether it be Communism, the Black Legion, or the Ku Klux Klan.

REDS IN PORTLAND

"Chief of Highway Police Charles Towle has already been instructed by me to report concerning any evidence he may find of the activity of these groups within the state.

"The matter will have my most immediate attention upon my return from the Democratic convention."

That the "committee of 100" has proof of Communistic activities in Portland was told today by Willis Blake Hall, chairman of the Forum committee to a Boston Evening American reporter.

"This organization must become a rallying point for all the patriots who want to fight any action by individuals or organizations alien to our government," he asserted.

"The major effort of the committee will be directed at first toward uncovering and stamping out Communistic propaganda.

"There has been evidence of subversive activities and we must awaken the people of this state to the knowledge that Communism has already gained a foothold here.

FLAG STONED

"Only yesterday an American flag was stoned in South Portland.

"This incident followed on the heels of the refusal of five school children to salute the flag in a public playground.

"It is obvious that these children must have been instructed not to salute. They have been made innocent victims of subversive propaganda.

"Our organization is determined to conduct an open forum to shed the light of truth on political matters.'

This sentiment was echoed by George J. Woods, of South Portland, past county commander, American Legion, and Treasurer of the "Committee of 100," who said:

"While we have been working diligently for several months our action has just taken concrete form.

"Faced with definite proof of Communism in Portland, we gathered together to combat this menace.

"We look for an even greater support as our fight goes on."

Action by the Committee of 100 followed closely a petition by the Civil Liberties Committee of the Portland League and Peace and Freedom asking Governor Brann for an inquiry into the Black Legion.

Dr. C. Eugene Fogg, national vice-commander of the Society of 40 and 8, Cumberland County Commander, American Legion, and a member of the Committee of 100 denounced the Portland League today as being connected with one of the most subversive organizations in the United States.

"We know that in America," he said, "there is a branch of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

"A member of the Portland League has admitted that they would shortly be connected with that branch.

"The central directorate of that International League has Communists and Socialists on the board.

"Moreover the American Civil Liberties Committee has a complete Communistic directorate.

"It is unfortunate that many sincere and patriotic citizens have been deluded into supporting that organization."

Wife and Other Woman

MRS. ADA GRIFFIN

Nail in Lung, Australian Boy in N. Y.

New York, June 24 (INS)—With a nail in his lungs to spell death unless quickly removed, Kelvin Rogers, three, today completed his 53-day journey from Melbourne, Australia, and immediately entrained for Philadelphia for an operation under the bronchoscope.

Although racked by a cough, caused by the steel sliver he swallowed more than a year ago, Kelvin was not thinking of a hospital room.

"I want to see Mae West and Shirley Temple," he announced.

Kelvin, a chubby youngster in a sailor suit, romped the decks of the steamer Jeff Davis and gaily tossed several passengers' toothbrushes overboard.

"I'm a big Tarzan, but I'm to be a sailor when I'm a man," he shouted.

Everything clicked to make possible Kelvin's journey half-way around the world, as men and nations realized a life was at stake. It won't cost the family a cent.

Dr. Chevalier Jackson of Temple University will perform the operation at the university. With the consent of Shipping Board and immigration officials, the child and his mother were given transportation by the American Pioneer Line.

Mayor's Beano Ban Hit by Norton

Mayor Mansfield is attempting to create a monopoly to protect the beano games now operating in Boston, City Councilor Clement A. Norton of Hyde Park charged today.

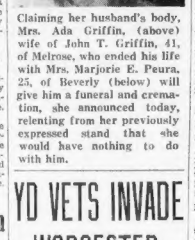
He is "kidding the public again" and is "obviously insincere" in his declaration of war against professional beano operators, Norton asserted.

Councillor Norton's fire was drawn by the statement of the mayor that the "beano craze is getting out of hand" and that no more licenses will be granted for professionals to operate in Boston.

"Mayor Mansfield wails that he is unable to combat this practice alone," Councillor Norton said. "But he isn't trying to combat beano. He's attempting to create a monopoly to protect those who are now operating in this city.

"The mayor states that 20 beano enterprises are operating daily in Boston and that is a strange admission.

Claiming her husband's body, Mrs. Ada Griffin, (above) wife of John T. Griffin, 41, of Melrose, who ended his life with Mrs. Marjorie E. Peura, 25, of Beverly (below) will give him a funeral and cremation, she announced today, relenting from her previously expressed stand that she would have nothing to do with him.



YD VETS INVADE WORCESTER

Worcester, June 24—With the Yankee Division Veterans' Association national convention 48 hours off, hotels, rooming houses and private homes were taxed to capacity today as some 3000 veterans and guests poured into this city.

More than 800 veterans are expected before Friday and plans are being made to have Pullman cars drawn into the railroad yards to house late comers.

Saturday noon will start a parade expected to take seven hours in passing one spot. More than 20,000 men, women and children are due to participate.

At Tech Field, adjacent to Worcester Polytechnic Institute, military maneuvers will be held. The Distinguished Service Cross, highest honor bestowed by the U. S. Government, will be awarded posthumously Major-General Clarence R. Edwards, deceased leader of the famous "D."

HOLY LAND EXHIBIT

Put in Place Ahead of Time

Because they made such remarkable progress in unloading their Holy Land exhibit and starting its foundations in Horticultural Hall, the Gauci brothers took a three-hour holiday today.

The Gaucis, Joseph and Salvatore, are the creators of the modern marvel that the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser have succeeded in bringing to Boston and opening next Tuesday.

There was a little discussion about the "three hours off," but it never fitually won. He wanted to see some of Boston. It was the first time he—and Salvatore—had been there.

With a newspaper representative the pair made a flying tour of the city's churches and also went to Newton to visit Boston College.

"I feel pretty guilty about this," Gauci the elder remarked. "We should be putting in every minute to setting up the 'Holy Land.' But the weather has been so cool we did more work than our schedule calls for."

The Holy Land exhibit, hailed as one of the most remarkable pieces of work of the age, depicts in miniature the life of Jesus, with movable figures, on a recreated terrain of Palestine.

Proceeds of the nominal fees to be charged, will be shared with the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Sunday Advertiser-Boston Evening American.

WIFE RELENTS, CLAIMS DEATH PACT MATE

The pleading of her son caused Mrs. Ada Griffin of Melrose to relent today and claim the body of her husband, a federal relief official, who died in a suicide pact with his secretary, Mrs. Marjorie E. Peura, 25, of Beverly.

While Mrs. Peura's husband had claimed her body last night and made arrangements for burial tomorrow afternoon, Mrs. Griffin had declared she would not do as much for her husband.

"I was upset, but later on, after listening to my boy, I realized more fully what was the proper course," said Mrs. Griffin at her home on Lovell road.

TERRIBLE SIGHT

"It was a terrible thing for me to see, there in that cottage at North Reading, where their bodies were found. When I saw he had taken off his wedding ring, after 20 years, it shocked me even more.

"But it is my place to take care of his body and I will have private services at an undertaker's. His body will be cremated.

"I feel sorry for the girl and I believe both of them had lost their minds.

"I have been wondering what kind of poison they used, but doctors have not decided yet. I thought it might be a poison he had in the house to spray plants, but the doctors don't think it was."

LEAVE CHILDREN

After performing an autopsy on the two bodies, Dr. Perley returned a finding that death in each case was due to suicide by poisoning. He set the time of death as Saturday night.

Vital organs of both were to be turned over to Dr. J. Stewart Rodney, Boston pathologist, for analysis to determine the type of poison used.

POISON FOUND

Dregs of the poison were found in glasses containing a soft drink, which were set beside the bed on which the two bodies were found.

From their investigation up to the present time, police believe the pair, who are reported to have engaged in a clandestine affair in the past several months, made the suicide pact when it seemed their romance was likely to be ended by legal action.

Griffin was employed in the Works Progress Administration headquarters in the Park Square building in Boston and Mrs. Peura, who had formerly acted as his secretary in Salem, had been working as a stenographer in his office for the past few weeks.

It is believed they purchased the poison in Boston Saturday and then set out for the Reading camp where they ended their lives that night.

Police said they learned that Peura accompanied his wife to Boston Saturday and told Griffin to keep away from his wife. He had been aware of the romance for some time, police said.

MYSTERIOUS CALL

Mrs. Peura was said to have entered the argument and insisted that she would dine with Griffin that night but would be home later.

When she failed to return Saturday night Peura notified Beverly police of her absence.

Mrs. Griffin, unaware of her husband's friendship with Mrs. Peura, became alarmed Sunday, especially after receiving a mysterious telephone call from a Beverly woman that her husband had gone away with the young Beverly mother.

She went to the Peura home and there learned for the first time Sunday of the several-month romance, it was said.

Both believed the pair had run away and it was not until yesterday that the tragic ending of the romance became known to them.

Constipation
Undermines Children's Health
Your doctor will tell you that constipation is what makes so many growing children sickly. Poisons from the waste matter spread through their bodies and lower their resistance. A little Nujol every night will keep them regular as clockwork.
Mothers are the best defenders of Nujol. When their children's health is at stake, they use Nujol—the remedy that medical authorities prescribe because it is so safe, so natural in its action.
Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol safe for everybody. Does not affect the stomach, is not absorbed by the body.
Nujol makes up for a deficiency of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular bowel movements without griping.
Just try Nujol regularly for the next month and see if the children don't feel better than you ever suspected they could.
Ask your druggist for Nujol.

Home for 9 Evicted, Job For Father

Happiness, security and a fresh start in life was promised today to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gallo and their nine children, evicted June 11 from their home in Bremen street, East Boston.

Mrs. Gallo, cuddling her seven-month-old baby boy in her arms, was told by Judge Charles J. Brown, in East Boston court, that they would have a new home, furnished from top to botom, and that 'Papa" Gallo would have his former job restored to him at $28 per week.

Through the efforts of the Catholic Charitable Bureau and the family Welfare Society, the Gallo's new home has been selected and the business of furnishing it and stocking it with food for the nine fallow children is underway.

Meanwhile the Gallo's and their nine children will be cared for at the Chardon street home.

On June, 11, the Gallo's were ejected from their home. "Papa" Gallo had been unemployed for some months and was unable to pay the rent.

Cruelty, Desertion Win 2 Divorces

Two women won uncontested divorces in Middlesex probate court, Wore Judge George M. Poland, today.

Mrs. Amanda L. Langill of Arlington was granted a divorce from Willard K. Langill, New Bedford. She charged cruelty, and said that after her husband had left the army, he disappeared for 9 weeks. When he returned they quarrelled, and Langill attempted to hang himself, Mrs. Langill testified.

Charging desertion, Mrs. Elfrieda A. Negle of Malden was freedom from Francis J. Negle of Malden. She claimed that Negle left her after they had been married but two years.

Paroled Bonus Vet Seized in 'Holdup'

Paroled from state prison a week ago, William Sands, 38, of Columbia road, Dorchester, $120 of the bonus money, spent much of the balance and was in court today charged with attempted robbery while armed. He pleaded not guilty and was held in $5000.

Sands was arrested by seven policemen and a sergeant as he pointed a toy pistol at Nathan Pilotsky in the latter's home, Stanwood street, Roxbury, according to police. The prisoner said he thought, mistakenly, the house was where he hid his $120 and that was why he entered it.

Sands, according to police had served two terms in state prison, having paroled last week after seven years of a 7 to 10 year sentence.

Selassie Barred From Swiss Villa

Berne, Switzerland, June 24 (AP)—The Federal Council today asked Emperor Haile Selassie to stay out of Switzerland except for a visit to the League of Nations.

The Swiss asked the Ethiopian monarch to "refrain" from living in his villa at Vevey as long as the Italo-Ethiopian conflict is unsettled."

Peggy Wright Becomes Bride Of Winthrop Lane Brown

By BETTY ALDEN

UNLESS ONE OF last winter's debutantes comes forth with the announcement of a secret marriage which took place before now, Peggy Wright is the first bride among her sisters debs . . . She and Winthrop Lane Brown announced their engagement in April, and today she became Mrs. Brown at a high noon wedding in Leslie Lindsey Memorial Chapel . . .

Peggy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Wright of Waban and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Edwin Hacker Brown of Milton, and, incidentally, he is the nephew of Dr. Lloyd T. Brown of Milton . . .

NANCY HOLDSWORTH breath . . .

As she walked down the aisle with her father, Peggy looked like a living portrait of a Civil War bride . . . she wore a family heirloom gown of ivory satin made with a wide lace panel in the front and back, and she wore the lace cap and veil which belonged to her paternal great-great-grandmother . . . She carried a small, old-fashioned bouquet of gardenias . . .

Her maid and matron of honor, Miss Polly Klotz and Mrs. Harrison Rowbotham, wore colorful outfits of twilight blue chiffon, with piping and tiny buttons of white to match their large white straw hats . . . They carried arm bouquets of gladioli in brilliant shades mixed with a few stalks of deep blue delphinium . . .

After the ceremony in Leslie Lindsey, Mr. and Mrs. Wright gave a garden reception at their home . . . Mrs. Wright wore a powder-blue gown with a corsage of gardenias and blue orchids, and the bridegroom's mother chose an outfit of gray with brown accessories, and brightened by a violet corsage . . .

Many young pals of the couple crowded into Leslie Lindsey to hear the all important words of the service . . . and Winthrop provided five ushers to look after the seating of the guests . . . His cousin, Horton Brown, was one and the others were John Hammond, Bradley Dewey, Davis Dewey and Herbert Horn . . . Lucian Brown of Milton, the bridegroom's brother, gave him moral support as best man . . .

The newlyweds are going to the West Indies for a couple of weeks, after which they will be "at home" in Cambridge . . . Peggy is a cousin of Mrs. Andrew Adie who had all the bridal party at her house for cocktails last evening, after the rehearsal of the ceremony . . . later Mr. and Mrs. Wright entertained them all at dinner . . .

Florence Cobb Weds in Paris

OLDER BOSTONIANS who well remember that active and exuberant politician, the late John Candler Cobb of Milton, will be interested to hear of the marriage of his great niece, Florence Cobb . . .

John Candler Cobb belonged to one of those old New England families, whose members, in spite of financial security and membership in society's inner circle, have devoted their lives to public service . . . In this select group are the Lodges (the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge was a contemporary and close friend of Mr. Cobb), the Saltonstalls, the Bacons and several other high class old names . . .

Florence Cobb is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Candler Cobb of Rue Henri Matin, Paris, formerly of Boston . . . She is a niece of Mrs. Robert Amory of Milton, and her great-aunt, Mrs. John Candler Cobb also lives in Milton . . . Mrs. Henry S. Forbes of Milton, Dr. Stanley Cobb of Milton, Mrs. S. Bruce Smart of Bedford Hills, New York, and John C. Cobb, Jr., of Winnetka, Illinois, are other branches on her family tree . . .

The Cobb family and their immediate circle of friends are not the only ones around here interested in the wedding, for the bridegroom, Stanton Whitney, Jr., was a member of the class of 1934 at Harvard . . . and during his college days he attended most of the affairs of the younger set here . . . He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanton Whitney of Windy Knowe, Redbank, New Jersey . . .

The wedding took place yesterday in the Cathedral Church in Paris, with a reception at the Cobbs' home . . . In the autumn the newlyweds will again renew their Boston friendships, for they are to live in Groton, where Mr. Whitney has a job teaching . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Amos Little gave a dinner party last evening in honor of Mrs. Little's sister, who is on here from New York to make a short visit . . .

* * *

Most of our socialites seem to have ideas of making themselves pretty scarce this summer . . . what with so many trekking off to Europe and other distant places . . . Mrs. Freeman Hinckley and her debutante daughter, Eleanor McClure, are going as far as Honolulu in their summer travels . . .

And Polly Klotz, maid of honor at Peggy Wright's wedding today, is soon to pack her clothes into a wardrobe trunk and embark for a North Cape cruise . . .

MRS. MELVIN M. JOHNSON of Brookline and Miss Carrie Neal Augustine of Chestnut Hill are both spending a few days at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York.

THE CEREMONY OVER and on their way to the reception at the Edge Hill road home of the bride's parents in Brookline, Henri Miles David and the former Eleanor Stephenson were about to kiss as the cameraman intruded his lens into the bridal limousine. The ceremony took place in the Church of the Saviour in Longwood. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William R. C. Stephenson.

Edwin T. Green Takes Bride in New York

A Boston boy and a New York girl went around to the famous Little Church Around the Corner, in New York to be married, Monday afternoon when Miss Jean Cornelia Porter, daughter of Mrs. Alfred Haynes Porter of New York and Rumson, N. J., became the bride of Edwin Thurston Green, son of Mrs. Merrill Holden Green of Boston.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Harry Irvin Caesar. She wore a white satin gown made on princess lines with a lace collar and long, lace trimmed sleeves. Her tulle veil was caught to a cap of rose point lace which had been worn by her sister, the former Dorothy Porter. She carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies-of-the-valley.

Miss Lucian MacDougall Porter was her sister's maid of honor and only attendant. Merrill Mead Green acted as his brother's best man. The ushers were John Haynes Porter, brother of the bride, and Oliver Holden Green, brother of the bridegroom.

The bride was graduated from Miss Chapin's school in 1931 and from Bryn Mawr College, class of 1935. She is a member of the Junior League of New York. Mr. Green was graduated from the new preparatory school in Cambridge and attended Harvard College with the class of 1937. His mother is the former Miss Olive Mead, and he is a grandson of the late Charles Williams Mead, who was honorary curator of anthropology at the American Museum of Natural History.

"WHEN I LOVED YOU"

By Hazel Livingston

CHAPTER 24

More than she had ever wanted anything, Jan wanted a new dress for this, their last dance. She and Evelyn talked it over, and they spent two unseasonably hot October afternoons tramping from one bargain basement to another, looking over the "specials" marked down from higher prices.

But they didn't like what they could afford, and what they could pay for they wouldn't have. So in the end it was the same white lace which had once belonged to Ardis.

Though many of the out-of-town guests were invited to stay overnight at the Kramers', Jan's invitation never included that. Lowell called for her and took her home, himself.

Evelyn complained at the slight and always kept poor Jan on pins and needles, threatening not to let her accept. But in the end she always broke down and let her go, though not without plenty of caustic comment about the Senora's bad taste and the differences between hospitality in the days that the Faileys owned the place, and now!

A devil of perverseness never failed to possess Evelyn on these, Jan's red-letter days. A Kramer party tonight, and today Evelyn must literally tear the rooms to pieces, on one of her rare house-cleaning jags, or go to bed with one of her equally rare and violent headaches.

So instead of having time to bathe and dress and primp as she'd planned, poor Jan was always sentenced to a last minute tumbling into her clothes, with Lowell waiting in the little living room, and Evelyn dashing in and out, poking, hissing, giving directions, crying "Hurry! You're always late!"

Same Old Story

But this time no one is going to make me do anything, Jan promised herself grimly. For once I'm going to enjoy getting ready for a party. I'm going to fill the tub to the brim with boiling hot water and lie in it and enjoy it—and do my nails and—

But the tub was full of cleaning rags and a bucket and scrubbing brush adorned the wash basin.

"I'm nearly dead. I've slaved all day," Evelyn said. "I did think you might want to help a little, but it takes you so long to dress when you're going anywhere. You might just wipe up the bathroom floor and do the bowl and tub for me, though. It's kind of messy. I washed my hair and did a little washing in there before I started in on the cleaning."

And after that, as Evelyn pointed out, while she was at it, Jan might as well go over the kitchen floor, too. And then there was the furniture to move back into the living room.

The same old story!

Lowell was at the door for her, before she'd even started to dress.

There were prettier girls and better dressed and more carefully groomed girls at the Kramer's party, but not for Lowell's eyes. For him they didn't exist. For him there was only Jan.

For her there was always the nostalgic wonder of the old house, the absurd childish hope that it might be hers one day. She saw herself and Lowell moving about in it alone, characters in a fairy tale.

The people who filled the house were never real people to her. She just went through the motions of seeing them, talking to them, smiling at them.

Tonight a famous South American band played in the distant end of the living room. Gayly dressed strangers wandered through the house. In the small book-lined room that Evelyn always spoke of as "papa's den" Mr. Kramer had shut himself away from the frivolity.

The senora, beautiful, detached, with her Mona Lisa smile that was faintly indulgent, faintly scornful, moved among her son's guests, graciously welcoming, cleverly managing, a soft-eyed yet strangely disapproving dowager in thin, trailing black, the jewels of a long dead queen on her small, plump white hands, her ears, her throat.

'Are You Happy?'

Her eyes rested on Jan, her warm hand touched her shoulder. "Are you happy, my child? You are too quiet, too dreamy for an American girl."

Jan smiled shyly. She never knew what to say to Lowell's mother. She never could be sure whether she was laughing at her, or being sorry for her.

But it didn't matter. There was Lowell.

Through the whirling, laughing dancers they found each other, each going swiftly, unerringly, to where the other stood.

Because she was so plainly Lowell's girl, Jan was always popular. Never a dance but what some boy was at her elbow, "Shall we dance?"

Girls asked each other: "But who IS she? You never see her anywhere else!"

Then someone would remember that she went to Miss Carver's a year or two ago, that she was Ardis Falley's cousin, and someone else would remember that the Faileys were an old family whom everyone used to know, and they'd dismiss her for a more exciting bit of gossip. But they'd go out of their way to be nice to her, for wasn't she Lowell Kramer's choice?

When he had danced with the girls his mother bade him not forget she shed the attentions of the hovering young men, and they drifted together, dancing dance after dance. For a while they spoke only in broken snatches. Then he said:

"I've been waiting all evening for this."

"I wish it would go on and never stop."

"I can't leave you, Jan, darling."

"But you're going to . . . and you never told me."

"I couldn't. I couldn't face it, Jan."

His arm tightened on hers. His tense fingers gripped hers like steel.

Congress-Chosen Rose-Pink Linen Culotte

"CORONATION PINK" it is called on fashion color cards . . . the rosy shade of this linen culotte . . . because rose-pink is a favorite English color and one that's going to be repeated time and again when smart crowds attend coronation ceremonies. But to bring it nearer home, it's the exact shade of spicy pinks you find in tiny white-picketed gardens of New England. Most important of all, it is ravishingly becoming to a tan or a lily complexion.

If you've ever thought it a shame that clothes which allow real activity are on the whole pretty unexciting things that you don't do a thing for your eyes or your hair, you'll change your mind when you try on this culotte. Miss Natalie Folsom models.

Awarded the black-and-silver tag of Fashion'Congress merit, not only for its unusual new color, but for its unobtrusive details, and the cleverly cut "split" that's skirt-like in repose or in movement. Comes in other luscious tones, of green, blue or yellow. It is quite inexpensive.

Marketing WITH Martha LEE

FROM MARTHA LEE'S WEDNESDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WMEX.

THE CORRECT COOKIE or cracker adds much to any occasion. Particularly is this true of the summertime, with its many gatherings which, although informal, must nevertheless be perfect in detail.

Imported biscuits now come in new low-priced packages and three of these packages sell for 95c. They include cheese fingers, celery fingers, lemon creams and many attractive assortments for card parties, cocktails, appetizers or family get-togethers.

IF YOU ENJOY SMOKING, but object to nicotine, you will want to try the new cigarette that has just come in the market. It is a mixture of Turkish and other tobaccos and sells for 15c a package. The unusual thing about it is the filter tip which excludes 75 per cent of the nicotine and also keeps little pieces of tobacco from getting into the mouth. One of the chain stores carry these for your convenience.

EVEN THE MOST ADEPT picnicker, who prides himself on his skill in making the fire and preparing the food, will welcome this small grill with four pointed legs, which can be stuck into the sand or the ground. It sets directly over the fire and will keep the coffee pot from spilling over at just the last moment—always a catastrophe! Folds up conveniently. Sells for 50c.

SOUP IS A STIMULATING, satisfying beverage and is particularly welcomed by those doing strenuous work. Heretofore it has been difficult for picnickers or hikers to carry it along, but with this dehydrated vegetable powder, which simply needs to be dissolved in water, anyone, any place can have the joy of a steaming cup of nourishing soup. Ten cents a package—enough to serve three.

WHAT WITH THE HIGH PRICE of potatoes many are looking around for substitutes, and what is more reasonable than noodles? Chicken and Egg Noodles sell for 29c, Spanish-style Noodles 29c and Ravioli 25c for a one-pound jar.

TO ACCOMPANY a summer beverage this new cookie is ideal. It is light, delicate and crisp with a chocolate or vanilla cream filling. These sell for 29c, a pound.

ONE CHAIN STORE has a special on their own brand of mayonnaise this week. An 8-ounce jar sells for 13 cents, a pint jar for 23 cents and a quart jar for 39 cents. This mayonnaise is made locally by a real master mayonnaise maker and every jar is full of honest-to-goodness quality. A good supply is needed for summer salads.

MINTS ARE THE perfect choice to top off a dinner party. They also are an ideal hot weather candy. Indulge your fancy for a famous brand which comes in all shapes, sizes and colors and can be purchased at a very unusual price of 30 cents for a 14-ounce package. These have always sold for $1.00.

SUMMER FOODS call for crisp and tangey accents. Here is a new crisp pickle, very thinly diced, that is sweet spiced. Crisp as they come from the jar, they are extra crisp if chilled before using. A 10-ounce jar is 22c, or 2 for 43c.

SUMMER SCHEDULES blow hot and cold—be prepared for any weather with covered dishes that are heat proof and cold resisting. In other words, they can be used in the refrigerator or the oven with equal success. So often we want to start the meal in the morning and finish it in the afternoon. This can be done very easily by starting preparation in the morning. Then place the food in the covered dish in which it is to be baked and put in the refrigerator until time to bake. These dishes come in a number of sizes. The prices, depending upon the size, range from 29c to 79c. They are of a clear white pottery with a red stripe and are very effective for table service.

MARRIED COMRADES

By Adele Garrison

CHAPTER 30

ALL THE humiliation and searing self-condemnation to which I had subjected my spirit in that time months ago when I had thrust a meddling hand into Katherine's affairs rushed over me again as she looked at me in an amazement in which I would not have been surprised to find contempt.

Nor would I have blamed her if that had been her reaction, for my letter to her husband, my brother-cousin, of which I only just now had told her, had been written months before, in defiance of her mandate that no one must tell Jack of the outrageous letter she had received from the sister of his partner.

But there was nothing in her face save astonishment, and then, as I averted my eyes from hers, she stretched out her hand and put it over mine.

"Don't look like that, dear," she adjured me. "Don't you know that I realize whatever you did was because of your love for me?"

"Indeed, it was," I returned a bit huskily, "but that doesn't excuse me. I had no excuse for meddling. But I do want you to know that I repented and, although I did not intend to send the letter, it was mailed for me."

"Suppose you tell me all about it," she said, and there was something elusive—almost indefinable—in her voice, which gave me the notion that she was not altogether displeased that I had disregarded her mandate. With a sudden lifting of my spirits, I leaned forward in my chair and met her eyes.

"When that despicable letter came from that woman," I said, "you froze, but I think I went berserk."

"I know," she said faintly, and I knew that she was remembering, as I was, the very look of the long letter which Ruth Hayes, sister of Jack Bickett's partner, had sent to Katherine from the wilds of South America, where the three were in their work camp, the only white people for many miles.

We had heard of Ruth Hayes before. We had seen her rather attractive face in the feature sections of the Sunday newspapers and had read accounts of her expeditions, as her brother's companion, into the wilderness regions of the countries to which his work called him. She was accounted a wonderful "wilderness woman," afraid of nothing, ready to endure any hardship, always standing shoulder to shoulder with her brother and the men of his party whenever an emergency occurred.

I had mentally called myself a cat when at first sight of her pictured face, I felt an intuitive dislike for her. I found myself harboring the mean suspicion that one reason for her love of the wilds was the opportunity it gave her to gain the admiration and affection of the men who were her brother's partners.

To be the only woman on an expedition such as her brother engineered, to be admired and hailed as a perfect comrade, and later to be desired—this, I was sure, was the lure which called her, rather than the self-sacrificing love for her brother, which the newspaper accounts touted.

And then she had turned her attention to Jack Bickett.

The words of the letter she had written to Katherine were etched in my brain. She brazenly told Katherine of her love for Jack and of his for her, and asked Katherine to divorce Jack, that the way might be paved for her own marriage to him.

I might have accepted the letter, as did Katherine at first, but for the fact that she stressed the point of keeping Jack in ignorance of the letter. She assured Katherine that Jack was anxious for his freedom, and was deeply in love with herself, but that his Quixotism would not permit him to ask his wife to release him.

Therefore, Ruth suggested that Katherine write Jack and tell him that she was tired of his long absences, that she had ceased to love him and wished her freedom.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Woman, 71, Refuses Home With Children, Plans to Wed Old Friend

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"I'm free, white and seventy-one," she writes, this Boston friend of mine. "Independence Day is going to be a mighty significant day to me, for that's when I'll shout my independence to the whole world. I'm going to be married."

Here is a woman after my own heart. That's what I thought as I read her introductory paragraph, and the more of her letter I read the more convinced I became.

Seventy-one and a bride-to-be—you don't approve, don't think a person that old could expect happiness in matrimony?

That's where you're wrong—and pardonably so, for you haven't read what she writes, studied why she, in the sunset of life, chooses the pathway of youth, hopes for the happiness of youth.

So now, and with much pleasure, I give you the rest of her really unusual letter:

"I am a widow, have four children and a little home of my own. All my life I've been independent, proud and self-supporting. My children respect me because they have been taught to and because good fortune enabled me to live until now without seeking assistance from them.

"Today, however, I find my situation changed. My money almost gone, taxes rising and costs reaching new heights, it would be impossible for me to live long as I have lived.

"Of course my girls and boys are anxious for me to live with them. They've arranged a little program that would please me with each of them for three months at a time. I'd have the guest room, complete freedom, perfect happiness and all that sort of thing. Promises can be attractive, though not so much so when one is as old as I.

"About six months ago I renewed a friendship with an old school chum. His wife died a year ago and, like myself, he's a moderate ship upon an uncharted sea. We've much, ever so much, in common, he and I.

"Perhaps that explains our engagement and the wedding July 4, but, thinking back, I believe I've always loved him, might even have married him years ago had I not met another and he the girl who became his wife.

"Together we shall live until death takes one of us. We'll have our home—two homes, in fact. We'll be independent (that's the important thing. And, I'm sure about it, our children, his and mine, will love us just as much even though we refuse to live in their homes.

"My mind is made up. Our marriage is going to take place. Yet, even so, I should like to have your opinion, for I've followed your column for years. Do you think I am foolish to expect happiness at 71?

"MARY J."

MY DEAR FRIEND:

You are doing the wise and sensible thing. Your children, I'm sure about it, will love and respect you the more for your courage to dare to be independent at 71.

There isn't a single reason why you and the old school chum shouldn't be as happy as any other newlyweds, regardless of age. It will be almost like living your life all over again. You will be able to go places, do things, recapture interests lost in the responsibilities of bygone years. Honestly, I envy you.

No mother can be assured of happiness when she goes to live with sons and daughters-in-law. At best, you can never be more than a guest in the home. And, unless you have the superhuman ability to submerge your character, bury your likes and dislikes and become a perfect "yes" woman, you are bound to find the "welcome" sign over the door an exceedingly fragile thing.

Doubtlessly, your children may not approve of your marrying at 71. But why should you care? It's your life, yours to do with what you wish. And always there is the realization that the matrimonial chance you're taking can never be as hazardous as that of the woman expecting a Paradise in the home of a married child.

Go through with your wedding plans. That's my advice. And the best of luck in the world. That's my wish.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Employment conditions improving and wages increasing, it is now possible for me to marry Katherine, the girl I've courted for two years. Still I'm at a loss to know what to do. Her attraction for me is largely physical. She's not particularly intelligent, neither could she be called a moron.

Her lack of intelligence probably accounts for the fact that she's an outrageous flirt. Still I can't put her out of my mind. Her charm for me is almost diabolical. I surmise that Cleopatra had the same deadly attraction for Caesar.

Honestly, I don't love her, but I can't get her out of my mind or life.

R. S. T.

MY DEAR SON:

Physical fascination is a good deal like a paper house. It makes a tremendous show of flame, but it subsides quickly. As you realize this perfectly, why consider taking this affair seriously?

Remember, after Caesar, in Cleopatra's repertoire of suits, Antony came along.

If you will forgive the slang, in that lady's life, "there were others."

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Bridge

A Foolish Double

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Yesterday I pointed out that the word "double" should be pronounced with caution when its effect is to make the contract a game-going one. But even when the contract is already at game, caution should not be abandoned.

The possibility of an abnormally long suit should always be taken into consideration. The player who sat West in today's hand will think of that the next time.

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable

	♠ AQ85 ♥ K87 ♦ 932 ♣ J85
♠ KJ109 ♡ 105 ♦ KJ5 ♣ AKQ7	North West East South	♠ 632 ♡ 9 ◇ 10764 ♣ 104432
	♠ 74 ♡ AQJ6423 ♦ AQ8 ♣ 9

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass (1)	1 ♠	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Dbl. (2)	Redouble	Pass
Pass

(1) A "trap" pass. But he trapped only himself.

(2) A very bad double. The strong bidding of North and South should warn West of a long trump suit.

West opened the King of clubs and continued with the Queen, South ruffing. South promptly took the spade finesse and ran off the rest of his trumps. When he led the last trump, the situation was:

	♠ A85 ♡ — ◇ 9 ♣ —
♠ J ♡ — ◇ KJ ♣ A	North West East South	♠ 6 ♡ — ◇ 107 ♣ 106
	♠ 7 ♡ Q ◇ AQ8 ♣ —

If West should discard a spade, North would discard a club and the entire dummy would be high. If West should discard a diamond, dummy would discard a low spade and the Ace and Queen of diamonds would be cashed, squeezing West in spades and clubs.

If West should discard a club, dummy would discard a low spade and South would take the spade and cash the Jack of clubs. West would then be squeezed in spades and diamonds.

Declarer thus made six hearts and the effect of the double was to make him a present of 1160 points.

Golden Magic of Summer Makeup

By ARLINE GOULD

IF YOU HAVE been wondering how you would look with a luscious golden tan magically acquired through cosmetics, you may have a trial make-up free of charge at a famous salon.

POSED BY JUNE LANG.

First your face is cleansed with a cold cream of a delicate lilac scent. Your eyes are washed with a benzoin solution which makes them clear and sparkling.

Then the artificial tan is applied—a clear sherry-colored liquid which so exactly simulates a natural tan that it can't be detected. While it is soothing to thin, sensitive skins, it is not in the least bit greasy, will not come off on clothing and remains on while swimming! It is removed with soap and water.

Next, a powder blend to match and subtly flatter your own skin tone is mixed before your eyes by expert hands. There is a wide choice of rouge and lipstick colors from which to select just the one for you.

Eyeshadow goes on next. We had a delicious aquamarine which did not look theatrical as it may sound, but gave a depth and warmth to the eyes which even we didn't suspect. For mascara, you may have conservative brown or black but if you're feeling gay and glamorous, as we were by this time, you'll choose a gorgeous turquoise or emerald shade!

Not only does this salon select the blend of powder and shades of rouge, lipstick and eye makeup which most flatters your skin and features, but it has a new service which will interest many.

This is a service for brides. After you have selected your color scheme for the wedding, take in swatches of the bridesmaids' gowns and of your own wedding dress. Leave for classification your own facial analysis and that of your bridesmaids.

Then, a few hours before the ceremony, an expert from the salon appears and will make-up your wedding party so that there will be a uniformity and subtle grace in all your faces.

If you would like to know the name of this salon where you can get a trial summer make-up free of charge and where you can get the bride's service mentioned above, write Arline Gould, Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope or telephone her at Liberty 4000.

'YOUR FIGURE, MISTER!'

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

MEN ARE INCLINED to take their overweight lightly. Women go in for slimming in a big way, but not so with you men! A couple of chins, more or less, would never persuade you to count calories.

"And, anyway"—the average man wants to know—"shouldn't a fellow get a bit heavier as he grows older?" Well, there is a tendency to accumulate pounds and waistline along with birthdays, but that doesn't make it normal. In fact, statistics indicate that, if after forty you keep your weight at normal, you will not only add years to your life—but life to your years!

When your doctor orders you to get rid of some of that fat, he means it. Moderate overweight at forty with a continued upward trend of the scales will put you definitely in the fat man's class at fifty—if you live that long!

You dread the thought of cutting down on your three good squares. "I tried reducing once," is the masculine brumble, "and I got weak. I had to go back to eating."

But if you go at reducing scientifically, you won't get weak. Safeguard your energy by including protein and the protective elements in normal amounts, with calories adequate for your basic requirements. The normal amount of protein is 10 per cent of your normal diet, and this percentage is not decreased in a reducing diet.

The average business man needs 16 calories per pound of normal body weight, which makes it possible to estimate your caloric requirements fairly accurately. Since metabolism depends upon active tissue rather than total body weight, you should multiply your normal weight by 16 to arrive at your caloric needs. Two-thirds of your normal caloric allowance provides a safe reducing diet by which you draw on stored fat at the rate of one to two pounds per week. There is nothing mysterious about aiding or subtracting pounds; it is purely a mathematical process. Calories are either burned as energy or stored as fat.

Our daily reducing menus for women are too low in calories to cover your basic calorie needs, and a set of "Man-Size Reducing Menus" have been planned for you. Every other Monday your dietitian will help you with your program. Let's get down to business with this reducing.

Cheerio!

Men can get aboard the reducer's bandwagon by sending a large self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ida Jean Kain in care of this paper. Ask for "Man-Size Reducing Menus."

A Few Funny Ones

There's the one about the young Englishman who was "razzing" the guide at Mt. Vernon, George Washington's home.

"Ah, a boxwood hedge! No doubt Washington got this fine hedge from dear old England!" said the haughty visitor.

"I guess he did," said the guide. "He got the whole blooming country from England!"

And then there's the stingy farmer who bawled out the hired man: "What do you mean wastin' ol a-carryin' that lantern when you go to call on your best girl? When I went courtin', I went in the dark!"

Here's a catchy one:

Tim: "What did she find?"

Be ready with some niftles when the occasion demands. Our 40-page booklet, Jokes and Toasts For All Occasions, contains 357 side-splitters. And when you're called on to propose a toast, don't get red in the face. Our booklet supplies you with 137 toasts to choose from.

The missing wife had received threats against herself and her baby, Peggy, a girl, [illegible] years old—according to Mrs. Long.

Mrs. Hess is the wife of Henry Hess, New York city business man, and the daughter of Timothy Donahue of Prospect street, Somerville.

The young husband was notified when Mrs. Hess failed to return or send word to her relatives. He flew here from New York, then asked Cambridge police aid.

INSURANCE QUIZ VOTED IN HOUSE

Spurred by disclosures arising from the Ludlow insurance racket probe, the House today passed a bill creating a special commission to investigate certain life insurance companies operating in Massachusetts.

Representative Edward J. Kelley of Worcester one of the bill's most active supporters, referred to "certain of these companies as 'legalized robbers' who have organized themselves by preying on the credulous public."

Numerous of his constituents he said, have come to the insurance committee citing instances of fraud and malpractice on the part of life insurance companies.

After going high praise to Insurance Commissioner Frank E. De Celles for his determined efforts to expose the insurance racket Representative Kelley contrasted the behavior of some of his predecessors who have gone on insurance company payrolls the instant their term of office expired.

Representative James Kilcoyne of Charlestown and Representative Owen Gallagher, of South Boston also argued vehemently for the measure.

Opposing it, Representative Horace T. Cahill of Braintree asserted that under existing laws the insurance commissioner is ample authority to make any needed investigation but, for reason, he said it is "entirely unnecessary to appoint a special commission."

A truck driver was injured and one of Quincy's newest $10,000 fire trucks badly damaged today, when two machines collided.

The ladder truck driver by Fireman William Barney was racing to 41 Newton street when the accident occurred. Driven by Fireman Barney was racing to 41 Newton street when the accident occurred. The truck, driven by William Sea, 18, of 2 Arbot street, Dorchester, entered on the opposite direction, was struck a passing [illegible] and upset. Shea suffered multiple lacerations about the face and head.

Al Capone Stabber Now in Solitary

San Francisco, June 24 (AP)—James C. Lucas the Alcatraz Island convict who stabbed Al Capone and in turn was sent sprawling by the ex-Chicago gang leader, was held in solitary confinement today while authorities took the case under advisement.

United States District Attorney H. H. McPike said he expected to receive a report of the affair from Warden James H. Johnston, but added he knew of no plans to bring the former Texas bank robber here for trial.

ARTHUR W. CUTTEN, GRAIN PLUNGER, DIES

Chicago, June 24 (AP)—Arthur W. Cutten, 66, who amassed a fortune in 30 years of spectacular market trading, died suddenly of a heart attack early today.

His wife, the former Maude Boomer of Chicago, called Dr. J. Paul Rees to their suite in the Edgewater Beach Hotel but Cutten [illegible] minutes later.

He had been in feeble health several months—but won a fight by proxy against a grain futures commission order barring him from the [illegible] grain pits.

On January 11, 1935 he was charged with failure to report holdings of [illegible] bushels of wheat futures with about $50,000,000 in 1933 and 1934 for the purpose of manipulating prices.

He was ordered out of the pits for two years but carried the case to the U. S. Supreme Court which ruled in his favor last May.

Next he was indicted on charges of failure to pay $414,453 in taxes on 1929 income. He was accused of attempting to evade payment totaling $229,941 on 1929 and 1930 income in another indictment April 28.

The fortune of Cutten was estimated from $50,000,000 to $100,000,000.

When 20 years old he came from his native Canada to take a $7 a week job in a Chicago brokerage office which gave him a knowledge of grain trading. In 1906, he married, gathered a $3000 stake and entered the Chicago board of trade.

He drew world-wide attention by his July corn coup of 1924. The general opinion was corn was due to drop. He began to buy at 70 cents a bushel, subsequently sold at $1.10, a gain estimated up to $2,000,000 — and followed through with an even greater "killing" in wheat.

Cutten seized the opportunity of rising prices to step into the stock market in the late twenties. He was reported to have made as much as $10,000,000 on single deals.

His losses after the market crash of 1929 were supposed to have compared with his previous gains. But he was reported to have cushioned them and to have returned—in the role of 'bear' instead of his traditional role of "bull" to the grain pits to recoup.

He will be buried in Guelph, Ont., his birthplace.

Too Much Booze

Liquor dealers in Salisbury were much worried today when they learned a group of taxpayers has petitioned for a writ of mandamus in the Supreme Court, claiming that the licensing board of the town has granted more liquor licenses than its proper quota.

800 ON STRIKE IN CAMBRIDGE

Eight hundred men and women employed at the Boston Woven Hose and Rubber Company plant, Portland street, Cambridge, walked out on strike this noon pending [illegible] production.

The strike followed three days of unsuccessful negotiations between representatives of Local 23 of the United Rubber Workers of America and officials of the company.

The union leaders were authorized at a mass meeting last Sunday in Cyprian Hall, Cambridge, to order a strike if necessary.

The strikers ask a closed shop, one week's vacation with pay and wage adjustments.

As the strikers gathered on Portland street, Salvatore Cumo, union organizer, mounted an automobile top and addressed them urging peaceful picketing on Hampshire and Portland streets.

One of the chief points at issue is the workers' demand for reinstatement of the Balderaux Sisters, to pay on a 100 per cent basis. According to company officials some of the increases would amount to $1, or $20 a week, if the demand was granted.

ANN MARSTERS IN HOLLYWOOD

Myrna Loy Off Screen Not at All Oriental, Just Nice

The Boston Evening American presents herewith the 18th story in a series of intimate glimpses into the life of filmland's capital—"ANN MARSTERS IN HOLLYWOOD." Miss Marsters is being given entree to all of the studios, and is writing her stories from behind the scenes in the land of make-believe. These stories will appear daily.

By ANN MARSTERS

Hollywood, Cal., June 24—In this land of glamorous girls and romantic young men, I have discovered again and again that the clear and simple fact is, "they aren't at all like that."

I mean—should you ask me if a certain star is REALLY as mysterious, as regal, as aloof as she appears on the screen, the answer would have to be—a thousand times "No."

At the moment I'm thinking, in particular, of Myrna Loy.

That name itself has a mysterious sound that goes very well with her slightly drooping eyelids and her slow, baffling smile. When she is alone, you might imagine her in a languid pose with a faint smile about her lips as she meditates on her own unguessable thoughts.

But what do you suppose she was doing when I first saw her? She was curled up on a sofa in her dressing room at Twentieth Century Fox studio, with her auburn head bent over a small loom.

She was weaving bright-colored yarn in and out, in and out. She was so intent upon her work that her lips were pressed together like a little girl's who is struggling over her arithmetic.

Freckled Face, Friendly Smile

I said hello, and she looked up and smiled—a wide, friendly smile. I saw a face that was vivacious and vivid—and there was not a trace of the "exotic" in her blue-gray eyes. There was a myriad of freckles beneath her camera makeup, and they were dotted generously over her arms and hands.

And she was dressed in the most unalluring way you can imagine—in a house dress and an apron.

I'm really not trying to destroy your illusions about one of Hollywood's foremost Glamour Girls. Myrna Loy is so much nicer and sweeter and more real than what your preconceived idea of her may be.

You would like her as a person—not as a mysterious being who has stepped from the land behind the moon.

Myrna herself laughs at the word "glamour."

"I don't believe there is any such thing," she said. "At least it has no substance, it's not a part of any woman's real personality. I know that that word has been woven around many actresses—but it's very easily brushed away when you get close enough to them, when you get to know them as they really are.

"Perhaps some women can maintain a 'glamorous' pose in their own lives—but I'm sure I couldn't, and I don't think it would be any fun at all."

Weaves and Weaves, Something Comes Out

Myrna laid aside her loom and put her yarn back in her work basket, where already there were several 4 by 4 squares of completed weaves.

"I haven't any idea what I'm making," she laughed. "But I like to do this to pass away the time between scenes. Perhaps when I get enough squares finished, I'll sew them all together and see what happens."

It was now "between scenes" of "To Mary—With Love," in which Myrna Loy will appear with Warner Baxter. It's the story of a married couple's troubles and how they are solved over a period of years.

"Warner Baxter and I go to the Dempsey-Tunney fight in the picture," said Myrna. "And it's not a fake—we see the actual fight."

It doesn't sound quite possible—somehow—but it is. Anything can happen in Hollywood, you know. At least, almost anything—and I learned that by a bit of movie magic, it is possible to reproduce any important event of the past 15 years and play modern actors and actresses against them.

Doesn't Like to Talk Just About Herself

But that's getting away from the subject of Myrna Loy. She doesn't, as a matter of fact, like to talk about herself. Not because she wants to appear mysterious, but because she is naturally a little shy.

You may have a delightful conversation with her—if you are prepared to do most of the talking. Myrna will keep on listening and smiling at you—and when she does say something, she says it slowly, in a soft, sweet voice.

She is more loquacious about her work than about anything else.

"I've been working steadily for weeks and weeks," she said, "and I love the type of roles I've been doing.

"For a while, you know, I was definitely 'typed' as a slant-eyed Oriental, and I think it would have killed my career before very long if I hadn't got away from it.

"I've been Chinese, Hindu, Javanese, Malayan, and heaven knows what. I used to think such roles were fun—and I even studied Oriental philosophy,

MYRNA LOY ANN MARSTERS

Although she doesn't like to talk about herself, Myrna Loy does have an occasional word for her art, and Ann Marsters, Boston Evening American feature writer, enjoys her confidence in the star's dressing room at Hollywood. Work, then more work, is Myrna's keynote, but she didn't become sensationally popular until she essayed dramatic roles. Then her stock with film fandom went skyrocketing. Ann is told. Between scenes she weaves with a loom—what, she doesn't know—but it usually turns out to be something.

Lawmakers Ready To Quit Tonight

Lawmakers are picking up their desks in the State House today in anticipation of final adjournment tonight.

Principal piece of legislation awaiting their approval is Governor Curley's supplementary budget of $1,092,687.

Several amendments were proposed during Senate debate yesterday, but most of them were voted down.

The debate was marked by a sharp clash between Senator William A. Davenport of Greenfield and Senator Joseph C. White of Jamaica Plain over White's motion to insert a $5000 item to pay for personal services by the Department of Public Utilities. It lost.

Born Saturday, the twins weighed a total of three pounds and two ounces, so now physicians and nurses are watching them carefully to help them win back their birth weight.

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

ROBERT E. ROGERS

Maxim Gorky's legal name was Alexei Maximovich Pyeshkov. Gorky was a pseudonym which he took as his own, meaning "the bitter one." He died last week of tuberculosis.

He was born in 1868 at Nijni Novgorod (the place of the great annual all-Russian fair). Of his childhood and youth we know a great deal from three volumes dealing with his childhood, youth and educational experiences, in all of whom the outstanding figure is his grandmother, who brought him up and sent him out into the world, one of the great intimate portraits of modern literature.

He was brought up in abject poverty, known in his boyhood as "the ragpicker," and for fifteen years he wandered about as a cobbler's apprentice, errand boy, draftsman's assistant, dishwasher on a Volga steamer, clerk, day laborer, and tramp. Many of his early stories dealt with the life of the poorer classes along the great river.

He early became a part of the revolutionary movement, as a member of the Bolshevik branch of the Social Democratic party.

Imprisoned, Exiled For Eight Years

After Bloody Sunday, which marked the beginning of the incomplete revolution of 1905, he was imprisoned, then exiled, and was not allowed back in Russia till 1913. In the meantime in 1906 he visited America to arouse interest in the revolution. Unfortunately, it was discovered that Madame Gorky, his long time companion, was not recognized as his wife by the Greek Orthodox church, and the influential people he hoped to meet would have nothing to do with him. There is an indignant chapter on this episode in "The Future of America," by H. G. Wells, who was also in America on his first visit.

Like many other Russians, he was very skeptical of the ideas and influence of Tolstoi, and in his "Reminiscences" of the older man he exhibited personal affection with a considerable irony regarding the sincerity of the wealthy nobleman who went through the motions of living and earning his bread like a peasant. In his best known work, one of the most distinguished classics of the modern realistic drama, variously translated as "On the Bottom," or "The Lower Depths," a play about a group of down-and-outs living in a disreputable flop-house, there is a character named Luka, a religious pilgrim, who is supposed to be a somewhat unfriendly fictional portrait of Tolstoi.

Preaches, But Does Nothing to Help

Luka comes among these people preaching a gospel of optimism and future happiness, but when he goes he has done nothing really to help matters for these despairing creatures. In fact their conditions seem to them worse than before they met him.

Yet the play for all its squalor and sin and crime ends on a note of revolutionary faith, when Satan, the drunken ne'er-do-well, orates about the saviour who shall come out of the lowest classes and about the essential dignity and splendor of even the lowest types of mankind. In contrast with the pathetic resignation and the faint mystical hope entertained by Chekhov (who died as Gorky was beginning his career) his ideas about people are not merely tender and humorous, always tolerant and hopeful, but distinctly strong and outspoken in their revolutionary faith.

Last Important Literary Member

For several years he had been working on a trilogy of historical and social novels which was to cover conditions in Russia from the death of Alexander II to the Revolution of 1917, the history, so to speak, of the revolutionary movement of which for many years he was the most powerful voice. The first two volumes were "The Bystander" and "The Magnet." Whether the work was completed before his death I do not know.

Gorky was the last important survivor in Russian letters of the age of preparation for the revolution. Andreyev had died in 1919. His was a period of education, propaganda, among peasants and industrial proletarians, which led directly to the revolution of September, 1917, in which the men who had given their lives to prepare for it played such a little part and suffered so much. But in his death he will undoubtedly be recognized as the greater figure in modern Russian letters and one of the most influential in bringing about the new age.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Annice Brink

Orville Knapp of radio and California coast fame is at the Ritz Roof Garden. He's eagle-like, blond—possibly having seen him fly his new Stearman with Wasp motor has colored the smile a bit—and his music is almost unbearably sweet.

Opening night it rained. And if there is anything lovelier or more romantic than rain on canvas . . . the electric organ a soft undertone to the melody of "These Foolish Things" and the original Knapp effect of a soprano voice singing wordlessly through a tiny megaphone ten feet away from the mike . . . I'd like to know . . .

ANNICE BRINK

Stuff of Which Gala Nights Made

This is the stuff of which gala openings should be made. And of which they all too seldom are!

Markie Byron of Milton danced with hardly a smile breaking the spell that music set on her face. Her black and white plaid organza had naive revers of white pique. Nearly every gown had its own jacket or cape. Priscilla Phelan's blondeness was emphasized by a powder blue net cape, with flowers of her print frock cut out and appliqued on the flaring edges of net. Jane Bogardus tucked a row of daisies along the back of her head, just above the curls. Newer than tiara style or on the temples.

If the June bridegroom thinks his clothes problems amount to something, just pass him this fashion note: Bronson Williams, who recently married Peggy LeBoutiller in New York, stood at the altar a vision in gray.

Silver gray morning coat, with matching trousers and double-breasted waistcoat of unfinished worsted, a light gray ascot with black diagonal stripe, pearl tie pin, gray gloves, and a pearl gray top hat completed the ensemble.

Sometimes Nicknames Sound All Right

These Interest Me: Sometimes I wish I had a nickname. Sometimes I don't. Intimates of Olivia Stone (one of society's best figure skaters, a small and pretty brunette) call her "Bugsy"; Caroline Oveson's cool dignity notwithstanding, she's earned "Coco"; Dorfy and Miffy are Dorothy McKey and Mary McKey Hallowell . . . Mother Pays Bet On Sex of New Baby

Repudiated loans and unpaid war debts, though common as oatmeal for breakfast, have not dulled the conscience of at least one person.

On Memorial Day last, a pre-nuptial supper dance was given for Bulkley Freeman Winslow and Rosamond Prince by Mr. and Mrs. Caspar Ranger, 2nd (the former Alice Winslow) at their home in Brookline.

Mrs. Ranger told Sammy Eisen, director of the Ruby Newman orchestra, that even while everyone was dancing in the drawing room the stork hovered over the roof. She also revealed that there was betting going on in the family, boy versus girl. Mrs. Ranger's impression was that it was to be a girl.

"I bet it'll be a boy," said Sammy immediately.

"All right," she replied, "a dollar that it's a girl."

A few days ago Sammy received the following note from the Phillips House of the Massachusetts General Hospital:

"Dear Sammy: Enclosed find check for $1. You won, June 2nd. We are both doing well Joseph Francis Ranger, 6 pounds, 9 ounces. Sincerely, Mrs. Ranger."

Lefty Sees It Through, Embittered Red Sox Genius Wins His Point

THE ONE-MAN REBELLION WHICH Lefty Grove staged in Chicago last week when he sulked about the waterfront until the early hours, vowing he would pitch no more winning ball until his teammates knocked in some runs and agreed to lead more industrious lives, has turned out to be the yeasty foamings of an artistic soul.

Austen Lake

Lefty came back to the box in Detroit yesterday for the first time since his emotional upheaval and faced a crisis in the first inning when Al Simmons, the heavy-duty slugger of the opposition, lifted the ball over the outfield screens and started Lefty off with a 4-run deficit.

Having complete initiative in matters of his own pitching, Lefty could have gotten pretty pouty at this point and gone off to the clubhouse to stew in his undershirt.

He has occasionally done this during the last few years when his supporting crew went bowlegged on ground balls, because Joe Cronin's manner toward Lefty is that of an indulgent spouse toward a headstrong helpmeet and he accords Lefty full jurisdiction over his actions on the field, to work when he wishes and to loaf at his whim. This would be a fatal policy with a lesser artist than Lefty, who has a dour, hillman's sense of honor which allows nothing for laziness and requires the utmost in effort.

Thus, if Detroit's runs had come from failures other than his own, Lefty, with his nerves on razor edge, would have had no compunction about stalking off the premises and, perhaps, creating an awkward situation like Van Mungo did in Brooklyn last week, when, outraged by sloppy support, he left for home. As it was Lefty crimped his cleats and pitched on until the Red Sox, feeling the burden of their obligation, rapped out the required runs to win his tenth victory.

FERRELL DID IT FIRST

MORE THAN JUST A VICTORY in the thick of a Red Sox slump, this may be the focal point of the entire season, by which Lefty, as the acknowledged key-man of the club, will smooth his ruffled feathers and go back to setting the pace. He has at least, driven home the point that he, for one, is not trifling and does not intend to be trifled with.

Nor is this the first time this spring that a Red Sox pitcher has gone acid about erratic support and determined to repay sloppy backing with a similarly negligent brand of pitching. Wes Ferrell, who is much like Grove under the skin, fizzed up on the way North from training and scolded his playmates roundly for loaing the ball down their neckbands and going paralytic at the bat.

He refused, he said, to carry eight other men on his shoulders, so for the rest of the tour home he served up cream-puff pitches which fattened the averages of rival hitters. Only, when the team reached Boston and it came time to get earnest again, Wes had trouble in getting himself back into gear, and during April and May was far from his 1935 form. How much of this was due to his deliberate spring letdown as a form of protest, and how much to the natural aftermath of the previous year's build-up, none can say, any more than the man breathes who can explain authoritatively the cosmic chemistry which swayed the normal flow of energies between Joe Louis and Max Schmeling last Friday night.

ROGERS HAS A NAME FOR IT

LATELY, OUT-OF-TOWN SPORT writers around the American League have been citing Ferrell and Grove as prima donna problems whose tantrums are upsetting the Red Sox balance and giving Joe Cronin the midnight sweats.

Nothing could be farther from the facts.

Because Ferrell and Grove, though aflutter with raw nerves, are bitter-enders, hard losers and prototypes of the vanishing breed of pre-war ball players, when Johnny Evers, Rabbit Maranville, Bill Carrigan, Ty Cobb and a horde of others, started grass fires from the heat of their ambition.

Only lately, in the foyer of a Back Bay hotel, Rogers Hornsby was complaining about the young, commercial-school type of athletes who, he said, paid out their energies on the ball field with the same frugal care that a clerk measures yard goods to the exact amount of the purchase money. And the blunt, corn-belt philosopher said: "Give me a team of mediocre men who are hard losers and feel poisoned by their beatings and I'll lick a league of better teams."

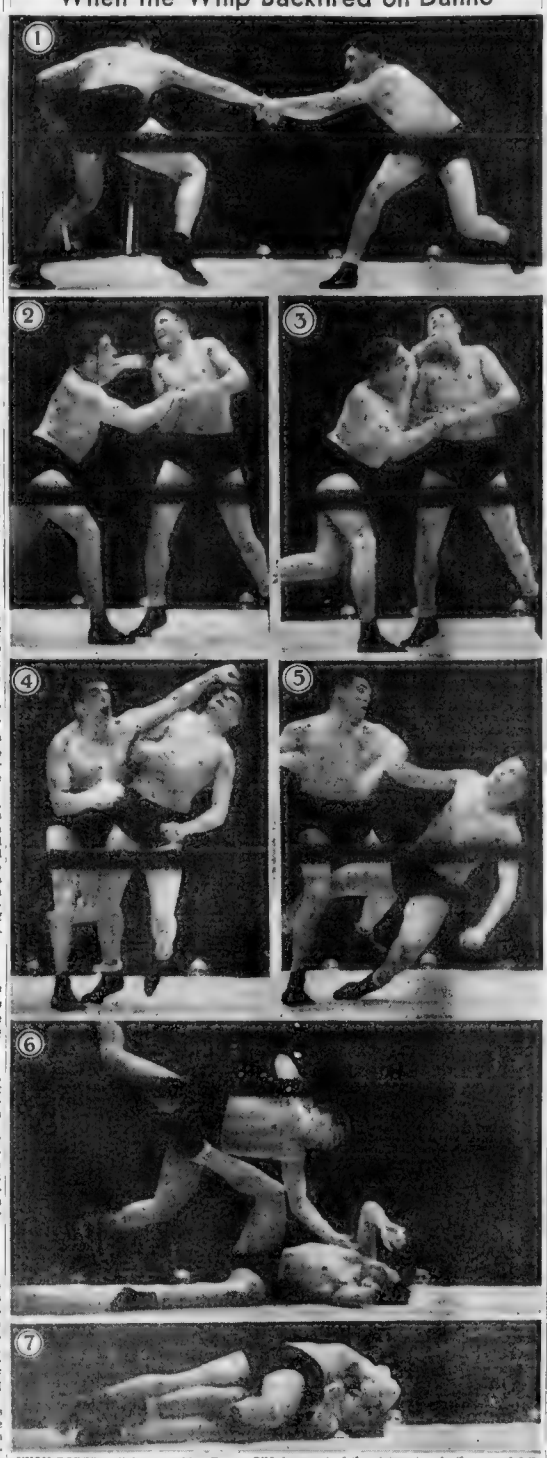
LEFTY'S DIAGNOSIS

THE BASIC fault with the Red Sox—if one may slip on the "expert" makeup so soon after the Schmeling-Louis exposure—is too thick a mixture of complacance with mechanical competence. It needs more irreconcilables like Grove, Ferrell and Werber, who are generally cantankerous bucket-kickers on the field and morbid mopers off. They may not be happy people, or make patterns for brighter living. But they belong to the restless breed of humans who are eaten by their own unease and who find in accomplishment a sedative for their suffering.

The real tip-off on this Red Sox condition of periodic droop is Grove's candid stand and his demand that the boys hustle as he expects himself to hustle—or else. This is the artist in him which demands the utmost, and here is the secret of the late John McGraw's crusty leadership and the secret of Mickey Cochrane's success in the last two years at Detroit. Because Cochrane's irritable genius for never being satisfied with less than perfection, agitated his men to greater flights of effort than they ever suspected they could produce.

When the Whip Backfired on Danno



YVON ROBERT all but smacking Danno O'Mahony out of the picture to win the second fall in their match at the Garden last night. Danno started it with an Irish Whip and as he pulled Robert in, the latter cut loose with a straight right hand that knocked the Irishman cold. Robert followed it up by leaping on Danno to pin him for the fall. This remarkable magic eye photo series clearly depicts the fall, but Danno came back to win the match.

Challenger Robert Bows In Thrilling Charity Bout

CHAMPION'S VICTORY IS MERITED

By JACK CONWAY

Danno O'Mahony put up the most brilliant bout of his sensational wrestling career as he successfully defended his title as world's heavyweight champion against Yvon Robert at the Christmas Basket Fund show of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser at the Garden.

O'Mahony, making his last American appearance before his departure for his home in Ballydehob, Ireland, on July 18, won two out of three falls. His "Irish Whip" gained for him the first toss in 27m., while Robert won the second fall in 2m. 3s. with a body press after he had punched the Irishman to the canvas.

O'Mahony rose to great wrestling heights as he scored the final fall after a furious struggle in 9m. 54s. One more it was the "Irish Whip" that won for Danno.

Ten days of training at Nahant had freshened Danno up so that he was at his best throughout the bout. He displayed more fire and speed than he has at any time since he came to this country. He was the perfect athlete.

By his victory O'Mahony retained his $10,000 diamond studded belt, and also gained possession of the new championship belt put up for the Basket Fund's show by the American Wrestling Association.

Francis McGrath, president of the American Wrestling Association, presented the champion with both belts following his victory. The presentations were made in the ring, while the crowd of 12,000 persons at the show cheered wildly.

Although defeated, Robert gave an excellent account of himself. He wrestled as well as he did in his last tussel with O'Mahony, but he was opposed by a vastly improved champion.

Danno Punches

O'Mahony and Robert set a terrific pace from the start. The young athletes were in marvelous physical condition. Their bodies were tanned by the sun, while their muscles rippled and danced.

Danno was intent upon being the aggressor whenever possible, while the sturdy Robert fought back with rare courage.

Twice during wild mixups Robert forced O'Mahony through the ropes. The young Irishman, the light of battle in his eyes, came up off the floor fighting, the mark of a true champion.

O'Mahony used arm locks to punish Robert. On one occasion Robert winced with pain as Danno forced him to the canvas with a double arm lock.

When Robert got rough O'Mahony proved he could punch with the best of them. He drove sharp right hand socks to the jaw in Max Schmeling style. These blows either dropped Robert to the canvas or forced the Frenchman to give ground.

During a mixup in the center of the ring O'Mahony suddenly seized Robert's right wrist, pulled him part way across the ring, reversed him and then crashed him to the canvas with the finishing part of his famous "Irish Whip." The time was 27 minutes.

O'Mahony received a wild ovation as he left the ring. It was necessary for Eddie Quinn and the other Robert seconds to work over the Frenchman for several minutes before he was able to leave the ring.

Back on the mat Danno rushed Robert in an attempt to win quickly. He forced the Frenchman back against the ropes, and riddled him with sharp, solid blows. Robert was in distress, and looked as if he was on the way to a quick defeat.

O'Mahony scored with his "Irish Whip," but had the hold broken when Robert punched him on the jaw with a savage left hook.

Danno struggled to his feet, and applied another "Irish Whip." As he started to whirl Robert, the latter crashed another left to the Irishman's jaw. There was terrific power behind the blow, and O'Mahony was knocked to the canvas, and was in a dazed condition.

Like a bolt out of the blue, Robert jumped on top of O'Mahony and pinned him in the record time of 2m. 3s. It was necessary for Jack McGrath and Freddy Moran to work over O'Mahony for a few minutes before it was possible to get him out of the ring.

Bowser

Pacer Victor at Lexington

Paul Bowser, recovering from an illness at Great Oaks farm, Lexington, today had cause to be jubilant over the victory of Dominion Grattan, one of his star pacers, in the two-minute pace at Lexington.

Dominion Grattan won the first heat in 1 59¾ and the second in 1-59¾, which is near the record. Tommy Berry drove the winner.

O'MAHONY IS WINNER OF 2 FALLS

When warfare was resumed, Robert opened fire with both hands to the jaw and drove Danno to the canvas. Yvon then applied a body scissors, and O'Mahony was obliged to fight his way free. The Irishman used an arm lock to punish the challenger.

WEATHER HALTS BEE HIVE ACTIVITIES

Mr. Boston Squire's Foe Is Ready

By Jack Conway

I MET Bill Hunefeld of California watching the O'Mahony-Robert wrestling bout at the Garden. He was with Phil Brubaker, sensational Coast heavyweight, who clashes with Jack Sharkey in a ten-round bout at Fenway Park tomorrow night for the Goodwin A. C.

Hunefeld is manager of Brubaker and he is more interested in what Brubaker will do to Sharkey than he is in what takes place in a wrestling contest.

Mr. Boston

"Boston fans will like Brubaker," said Hunefeld with a degree of confidence I like to find in a manager. "Phil is a colorful fellow in the ring. When he opens up with both hands, the opposition thinks it is raining punches.

"Brubaker made his best fights on the Coast against King Levinsky and Abe Feldman. He won both of these matches rather easily. If Brubaker licks Sharkey, Phil may clash with Max Baer in a California ring. On the Coast you cannot find anybody who does not believe that Brubaker is a better fighter than Baer.

"We considered the Sharkey bout an opportunity. Phil and myself felt that a victory over the former champion would put us in the big money.

"We don't expect to get a bout for the championship this year, but when the victor of the Braddock-Schmeling tussle defends his title in 1937 we feel Phil Brubaker will be the challenger."

I ASKED Hunefeld how old Brubaker is.

"Phil is 22 and has been fighting for three years," was the quick reply. "In the amateurs Brubaker won 10 out of 11 bouts by knockouts. Since turning professional, he has been defeating all-comers.

"You know the story about how Phil originally started to study for the ministry. They he decided he could do more good as a boxer as by living right he would be an example for the youth of the land.

"Brubaker is a good boxer, but he is at his best when he is tossing punches. He barrages with both hands, and gives the fans the kind of thrills they seek."

Hunefeld is a former lightweight star. Although he originally comes from Boston, Ore., he did most of his boxing in San Francisco and Oakland. He also managed Jimmy Braddock through the final stages of his training for hockey.

Brubaker was to fight his training mate Kerr & Hart from on Harvard street today. He has been doing his road work through the Fenway park morning, while in the afternoon he has been using through the park at Kelly & Lewis Gym.

Sharkey Fit

ED BAKER says Sharkey is in perfect shape. Was there to the polls early this A. M. and posing training pictures. Former champion is prepared to set a fast pace from the start.

"Schmeling's victory over Louis proved that the Old Guard can still carry on," said Sharkey. "Max's victory convinced me that the new crop of heavyweights isn't as good as the one of seven to ten years ago.

"During my ring career I tangled up with Dempsey, Wills, Godfrey, Risko, Stribling, Loughran, Delaney, Maloney, Wolcott, Scott, Christner and other prominent heavyweights. Tunney is the only heavyweight of my time that I didn't meet, and that was due to Gene.

"There are not that number of first class heavyweights around today which is why youngsters like Louis and Brubaker get so much attention. I always felt I could conquer Louis, which was the real reason for my comeback schooling beat me to the punch, but I now can straighten out the score by defeating Max in the event the latter upsets Jimmy Braddock.

"I weigh 198 pounds, and will be at my best against Brubaker tomorrow night. I do not underrate the coast heavyweight. He is a youngster, has speed and can punch. He will give me the kind of ring test I have been seeking.

"If I win, I shall step right past Louis and be the heavyweight to meet the victor of the Schmeling-Braddock go. We would have some new ring history if Schmeling won back his lost title, and I then came along and defeated Max as I did when we last met.

"In our two bouts, Schmeling never hit me with a right hand punch. It was because I kept my left duke popping into his face.

3 GAMES Tomorrow FOR FANS

OLD TIMERS TO SHOW WARES

The weatherman has no compassion for ball players regardless of their age. He pumped a driving east wind all over Boston and especially the National League Park and caused a halt to the proceedings scheduled for today. Tomorrow the Old Timers will play their game starting at one o'clock. This will be followed by a double header between the Bees and the Cubs which is scheduled to start promptly at two o'clock.

The luncheon that was slated for the Copley Plaza today will also take place at the same time tomorrow.

By DAVE EGAN

Mr. Chollie Grimm, mgr.,
Chicago Cubs,
National League Field,
Dear Chollie:

Everything is James dandy for you today, I suppose, and I hope the confusion that was in your mind yesterday has been cleared up.

You thought it was Old Timers' Day yesterday when Elder R. Smith dragged his whiskers out to the mound, but no, distinctly and definitely; Old Timers' Day which was scheduled for today encountered interference from the weatherman and caused the game to be put over until tomorrow so you will have to wait to renew your spirited battle with the Bees.

He is a spry old gentleman for his age, Chollie, and not the least bit potty. You will find that Elder Smith is not quite as old as "Doc" Kendall but he finds his position more nimbly and you needed the help of Anthony Cuccinello and Fiorenz Mezzo to beat him, didn't you, Charlie?

Loyal Egan

Some of my colleagues in the press box wished me to appy the old roadster to Antonos and Eugene for blowing the ballgame but I told them to wit, as follows, and viz:

"I have viewed Anthony and Eugene in nine successive games of baseball, and have used the adjectives colossal and terrific in describing their plays. They did noble eight times out of nine, and I know that if you have not written eight whizbang stories in our last nine tries."

The Bees behaved like a lot of dreadful doubleheaderers in that fifth inning, didn't they. D'ARANGelo and Moore led off with singles, Jordan pretended to bunt caught Cavaretta off balance, and whipped a single through him.

Then when Berger hit a simple one base to left that conniver of a Jordan caught Ethan Allen leaping and, all sizzling into what we Boston Writers Awards term the third passock, a new slang phrase meaning third base.

It should be a great lesson for you and your boys, Chollie. Personally I want no part of a couple like Jordan who will double-deal and cross-road like that, especially to fellows who are in the same racket as he is. Look out for that first-baseman's mitt of yours or you may find that you have no first baseman a mit.

Chaplin Tomorrow

This is to inform you that "Tiny" Jim Chaplin will go the throwing against your line athletes tomorrow afternoon in one of the two games slated to start at 2 p. m. You will find that he can badly mase them reach the plate and may be putpulls easy for you to, so I'll add as you to get Jim's back is half-sickered up or may be all loaded up so that they will not be operating for the finishing grind that is ahead of them.

You know me, pal. "Honest Dave" what they call me in straightforward south Kane county, and no decaffeinated me either, like there is in that lowbrow.

Goofy Lee again today. Cheice but not quite so much as yesterday. Here's hoping that your outfielders throw to the wrong bases and your outfielders let pop flies fall in front of them.

Sincere,
D. "SQUARE-SHOOTER" EGAN.

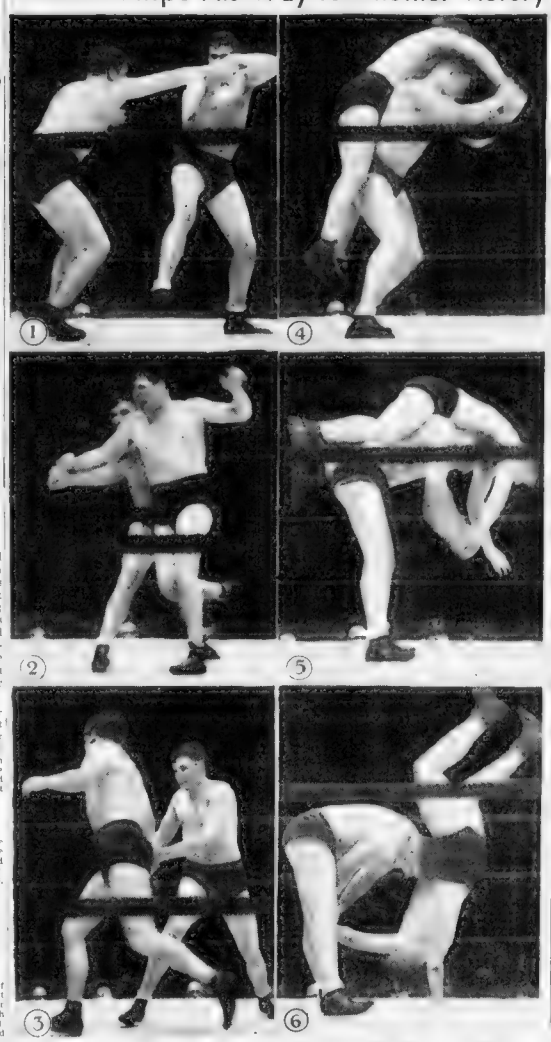
Danno Whips His Way to Another Victory



THE IRISH WHIP, perfectly executed, gave Danno O'Mahoney victory over Yvon Robert in Christmas Fund bout at the Garden last night. Danno used the whip to gain both falls and Magic Eye Cameraman Bill Jones got this, the last and winning fall of the night. It was a terrific thump and almost wrecked Robert for some time. O'Mahony grabs his foe by the wrist, whirls him around and then brings him over his back to smack him down on the canvas for the count.

Wes Ferrell Seeks 11th Victory

By JOE CASHMAN

Detroit, June 24—Wes Ferrell, one-half of the Red Sox pitching staff, starts his "iron-man" campaign in the "rubber" game against the Tigers today.

Wesley and Robert Moses Grove are most exasperating fellows at times. When they aren't winning and often even when they are, they cut up in a manner that has their colleagues itching to take them asunder.

They storm and rant and curse. Then throw gloves, break bats, smash water buckets, wreck club houses and go on silence strikes.

But some days they crop up. And what a story behind the mound as the result of one of the temperamental spells.

Seeks 11th

Ferrell is seeking his 11th triumph today. Grove gained his tenth yesterday. No other pair in the American League has yet gained in double figures.

Together they have a record of 20 of the Sox 37 victories. Lefty Grove, the complete master of the 58 minutes consumed by the game.

So they'll cover with a pair of jackets in baseball circles, but they're inseparable and inseparable to the Fenway flock. For just what the difference between controlling the pennant and a spot in the second division.

Ferrell, right in his prime, starts and bets of a two-year stint of the Browns on Sunday. He comes here today, with a Sunday rest.

He announced before the season he'd pass up the Washington and eager to start every third game thereafter. Last summer notice he had a bad game, he asked.

Grove, after being knocked out in his two previous appearances on the Fenway mound, the first with a Tuesday rest in June. The result and managed to give a good account of himself, 7 to 6 victory.

What a pair!

I wouldn't be fair, however, to answer them with the one without mentioning an ex-Red Sox Manager Joe Cronin.

He's the guy who has to handle them and keep them on the most difficult team at baseball in a manner that's amply shown by their winning average.

STEELHEAD SET TO STEAL SIXTH

WILSON Best at SUFFOLK

VANDERBILT COLT IN 'CAP

By DAVE WILSON
(Selections for fast track)

BEST—STEELHEAD, 6TH

Suffolk Downs, June 24—Speed to Spare, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's aptly-named Balko colt, is accorded the top figures over smart company in the $2500 added Commonwealth Handicap, six furlongs feature on a gala mid-week program here today.

Steelhead, as he placed in the mile and seventy yards of the sixth race, shapes up as the one solid wagering hazard on the day's sport.

FIRST—Lady Day, Queen Full, Malispina

LADY DAY, [illegible] last trip, needs only to come back to previous good [illegible] ores to graze the winner. Close Contention should be [illegible]

Success Note

Downs Up With Wilson

By DAVE EGAN

It is time that somebody let out a whoop and a holler concerning Suffolk Downs, that monument to race track in East Boston where the horses either do or don't.

A year ago this time, there was brisk wagering to the effect that Suffolk Downs would not open its gates on scheduled time, and that, if it did, they would not remain open for very long.

Time opened on time and they are open and packing in large crowds. The entire deal seems to me must be credited to Alvin J. Wilson, whom the boys poo-poohed so roundly when he was appointed general manager.

Dave Egan

"What the hell," they said, 'does Ailen Wilson know about running a horse track? Why doesn't he stick to his trucking business?"

Well, he has stuck to his business, at the time, he knew no more about running a horse track than a blind hog knows about sticks. But he went to the track, he took off his coat, rolled up his sleeves, got out his pencil and paper and started figuring. And when he was through figuring, he had a picture that looked like a million dollars.

Lou, the Pro

Of the many, many people who made Vic MacLaglen's picture star according to Vic himself, he promoted the bout over Vic Wingfield between MacLaglen and Phil Scholz, wherein MacLaglen won for himself a cauliflower ear and little else, he is to be considered for him the title "What Price Glory" when it made him famous.

When Smith first owned more terriers he often asked Lou to be his director for the fights they were to enter in New England. Lou Mack, and there was a time when he received tickets to the fights of their ballyhoo).

When O'Hara opened at Nutter's gardens he was smart enough to obtain Billy Ames as his chief ballyhoo thumper, for O'Hara had only boundless enthusiasm and a wholehearted desire to make money to qualify him for the post as general manager of the establishment.

Billy-um Ames has been a promoter all his born days. In Lancaster, years ago, he promoted bouts in which Jem Driscoll appeared, and in this country he promoted fist fights at the Boston Garden. He is smart and has the gentle polish of one who has traveled in many lands, and I know that O'Hara has always leaned heavily on the ripe judgment of Billy-um Ames.

In Bad Spot

There, my constituents were two strong batteries, Smith and Mack for Narragansett. A rank amateur in competition with such gimlet-eyed geezers figured to be given the jolly old run-around with rare abandon.

Wilson stepped into the committee room at Suffolk Downs when it seemed as if the next move was to haggle with a wrecking company over the price they would pay to cart it away, bit by bit.

They had the cheapest horses in the land, and not many of them, and Mr. Wilson must have had the cold shivers and the hot shudders when he looked at the bleak prospect. "Dumpy thou art, and unto dumps thou shalt return," he must have savagely paraphrased the Bible in those early hopeless days.

He had no staff, like Billy Ames or Eddie Mack to lean upon. His organization was composed of business-men and society persons and they were lost in the rough-and-tumble brawl of professional promoting. The finest thoroughbreds in the country are running over the Suffolk Downs strip each and every afternoon except Sundays, and the book-keepers and auditors are head-to-head as they scratch away at their ledgers.

And Mr. Wilson did it all by his oneself.

COTTON Leads With 139

SARAZEN FOUR STROKES BACK

Holyake, England, June 24 (AP)—Henry Cotton, the favorite, led the 36-hole qualifying test in the British Open Golf Championship here today with a total of 139.

His 71 over the Wallasey course today added to his record-breaking 68 at Hoylake put him four shots ahead of Gene Sarazen, the American favorite, who shot a 72 over Wallasey today, and Percy Alliss, British Ryder cup star, who had a 74 over the same course.

Two American professionals, Ted Turner of Pine Valley, N. J., and Willie Goggin of San Francisco, also neared themselves of qualifying. Turner made a 72 over the difficult Hoylake course for a total of 146, while Goggin's 73 at Wallasey gave him a score of 150.

Turner took 37 strokes coming in for a 72 and a total of 146, which placed him well up among the leaders. His card:

Turner in ..... 134 255 454—72—146

Turney is a former Massachusetts boy, whose home was in Andover. He was professional at North Adams, Mass., before taking the Pine Valley berth as playing pro three years ago. He is 28 years old, and is regarded among the top flight pro performers. He won the Mass. Open title in 1933.

Sarazen Flashes

Fine Ball Meddle, Ala., made a comeback today. He posted a 72 at Wallasey and signed registration cards of qualifying with a 74 total.

Two American cracks shot themselves out of the tournament. T. Denis Doolittle South Hamilton Mass., added an 83 today to his 79 and Frank Ball, Tennessee N. Y. put himself out though by scoring a "beginner's" 9 on the second shot into the sand at the side of the second green and then had the explosion shot for a three but he banged up the fourth where he missed his tee shot, hit his second into the sand across the green and barney got on in three. His card out Sarazen's putter carried him through the first nine and gave him a 35. This made his total for the round 72 and his 36-hole mark 143, four under Cotton.

The American continued to come from all over the course to get his pars. At the 13th he drove into the rough, hit his second into a trap, but chipped out a yard from the hole and dropped the putt.

Again at the 14th the putter worked. Here he knocked in a 25-footer, and he followed up with another 15-foot putt at the 16th. At the home hole, Gene lost a stroke when he banged his second over, chipped short and missed the putt.

Scores of other Britons allowed:

At Wallasey, Sam King, 37—40—77—150; W. H. Davies, 37—36—74—150; H. G. Hamilton—39—36—75—152, Leonard Crawley, 39—36—75—150.

Out ..4 4 6 3 5 5 4 5 4—40
Padcham, one of the British favorites, had a73 over the Wallasey course. This gave him a total of 143 and qualified him for the championship.

Phil Greets Boston With Night Pink Final

—Picture from International News Photograph Svc.

BRUBAKER OUT FOR K. O.

Meets Sharkey at Fenway Park Tomorrow

By SAM COHEN

Jack Sharkey, former world's heavyweight champion, and "Preacher Phil" Brubaker, California's new thumping sensation, are both fit and ready for their ten-round battle to be staged by the Gladwin A. C. at Fenway Park tomorrow evening.

Sharkey stepped off the scales after his last hard session yesterday afternoon weighing 197 pounds, which will give him about a seven-pound edge over his more youthful opponent from the coast.

Tony Paizazis, formerly of Boston and now leading matchmaker on the Pacific Coast, arrived in Boston yesterday to attend this bout and if possible sign the winner to meet Max Baer, former champion of the world, in a bout to be staged on the coast.

Tony admitted he will be rooting for Brubaker, for he said a bout between Brubaker and Baer on the coast at the present time would draw between $75,000 and $100,000.

"Brubaker is the biggest card that coast has had in recent years," Tony said. "He is a better card than Baer ever was out there and I am hoping to bring him back with me. However, if Sharkey wins I am ready to offer the Squire the match on the coast," Tony added.

Meanwhile Matchmaker Rip Valenti of the Goodwin A. C. said he is negotiating with the managers of Joe Louis, to get the dusky Detroiter to come here and meet the winner.

Brubaker told Valenti he would be willing to stay here to meet Louis if he succeeds in beating Sharkey.

The "Fighting Parson" from the coast takes things as a matter of course. He refuses to get flustered over the propects of stepping into the ring against Sharkey.

"One fight is just like another to me," he said yesterday. "I never allow myself to get too cocky or worried over a bout. I listen to advice and try to remember what they tell me, but I usually of my plan of battle when I get into the ring. Sharkey has it on me in experience and no doubt he will probably swing his style to baffle me, but I am sure it won't be puzzling and if he elects to fight me I know I can knock him out."

There is an excellent program on the radio menu for tomorrow with six all-round events supporting the classic attraction, which is certain to lure the largest crowd to see a boxing event here in many, many moons.

In the top six, Tiger Terry Warren of Nova Scotia, who outfloored Clayton Sutton twice in the first round, will meet with Leo Lacroix, who outpointed him in a ten-round bout in his last start.

Two former amateur champions will meet in the persons of Ralph Zanni of Providence and Dick Hogan of Cranston, who was defeated by Tony Pace of Cambridge in the semi-finals of the Golden Gloves tournament. Zanni will try to even a score with Hogan.

Fight Results

VENZKE, Bonthron CLASH

OLYMPIC TRIAL LURES RIVALS

By WALTER KILEY

Billy Bonthron, honored Princeton alumnus, attempts to scale the heights to Olympic recognition, a comeback effort, in the Eastern semi-final 1500-meters tryout at Harvard Stadium on Saturday.

Once again the former Tiger will match strides and stamina with Penn's Gene Venzke, intercollegiate 1500-meters title-holder since mile of the outdoor season.

It is almost a year now since Bonthron's presence on the program were sufficient to pack the spectators in wherever he competed against Venzke, then the under-dog, and Kansas' Glenn Cunningham.

STAR TRIUMPHS IN NEW ROLE

Jerome Bonaparte's tender romance with the lovely American girl, Betsy Patterson, as portrayed so beautifully in the Warner Bros.-Cosmopolitan production, "Hearts Divided," is attracting the movie fans to the Metropolitan Theater.

Beautiful Marion Davies plays the role of the charming belle of Baltimore of the 19th century and good-looking Dick Powell, the dashing young brother of the fabulous Napoleon.

The young Frenchman is in America to negotiate the sale of the territory of Louisiana by France. He has been officially given this commission by the Emperor, his brother, and he is finding this business of state infinitely tedious when he meets the delightful Betsy.

Here is a girl he discovers that a man can laugh with, and he is suddenly inspired to prolong this pleasant association with this unusual beauty in whose eyes there is ever a twinkle and on whose lips an unexpected quip.

He tells her he is a French tutor and gets himself hired to smarten her pronunciation of the luting language.

They never get much beyond the 'Je t'aime' stage but, as many have found before them that potent phrase is more than adequate in any language.

Also a happy end is indicated the great Napoleon, seeing an opportunity to further enhance his tremendous power by promoting an advantageous marriage for his young brother, terminates their idyllic romance.

Dick Powell isn't finding it dificult to look lovelorn as he gazes with appreciative eyes at vividly beautiful Marion Davies, descending the staircase in this striking scene from the Warner Brothers Cosmopolitan Production film masterpiece, "Hearts Divided." It is playing to delighted audiences this week at the Metropolitan Theater here.

Perhaps the European film sensation Hedy Kiesler is now in its third Boston month at the Park Theater. This is a screen record for this year.

Miss Kiesler has the role of a slave appearing at times during the film draped in only the sheerest of gauze. The story of Ecstasy is the tale of a woman's emotional life.

Adventurer and Wild Steer Clash in New York Street

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

You know, there was a time when wild animals roamed the spot where New York City stands now. Authorities differ on exactly when that was, though. The historians say it was a couple of hundred years ago, while Anthony E. Di Lorenzo of The Bronx, N. Y., says it was in 1923. And of the two, I'd take Tony Di Lorenzo's word before I would the historians'. Those doggone historians are only talking from hearsay, but Tony was on the spot, and saw the things he's going to tell us about.

FLOYD GIBBONS

Now Tony will be the first to admit that there were very few wild animals roaming New York in the year 1923. Game was very scarce in 42nd st., and even as far uptown as Morningside Heights, there was little wild life except an occasional mosquito. As a matter of fact, Tony doesn't claim to have seen more than one wild beast roaming the streets of New York in all his life. And it was just his luck that that one had to single him out.

In the fall of 1923, Tony was working for an automobile concern. At this place it was customary to do small repair jobs on new cars while they were parked on the sidewalk. That's just what Tony and his helper were doing. They were installing a pair of heavy wire gratings on the sides of a newly purchased truck.

They had just put in one grating and, while his helper held the other, Tony went inside the building to get more bolts. He was on his way back to the street when he heard a clatter of hoofs outside. They seemed to be about a block away, and Tony wondered vaguely what they were. If he had known then what he found out ten seconds later, he'd have turned around and gone right back into the building.

Tony came to the doorway and looked out. As he did so, he saw a man, working on another car down the street, jump to his feet and climb onto the roof of the car. At the same time he started waving excitedly to Tony and point... to something up the street. Tony couldn't see what he was pointing at then, but a second later he did. Around the corner came a steer—a wild one, with fire in his eye, his head down, and his long horns set for action.

Tony remembered then something that had been in the back of his mind ever since he first heard the clatter of hoofs. Not far away, at the Yankee stadium, they were having a Rodeo. The whole of the Wild and Wooly West had been combed for the meanest and most vicious steers in creation, and the pick of them had been shipped to New York for the Rodeo riders to work on. What a fool thing to do, here was one of those steers, escaped from the corral and coming full tilt at Tony.

The steer was almost on top of him before Tony saw it. He had no time to climb on the top of his truck as the other fellow did. The big, lumbering animal charged him as he emerged from the doorway, and Tony gave a jump to one side. The steer shot past him a few feet, then turned and made for him again.

Tony turned to run for cover, and as he did so the steer was so close behind him that he could hear the animal's heavy, labored breathing. The only safe place in sight was the truck, but he didn't have time to open the cab door and get in. There was one other place, though, that offered a certain degree of safety. The truck was parked a scant two feet from the wall. The space between looked too narrow for the steer to squeeze through. Tony's helper had just taken refuge in the narrow alley this created, and Tony followed him.

"I ran around to the front of the truck," he says, "with the steer right after me. But when I started to squeeze into the narrow opening, my heart almost stopped beating. My helper had the way blocked with the wire grating he was holding—using it as a fence between him and the bull—and he was too frightened to move it and make room for me."

It was the tightest jam Tony had ever been in. In another second the steer would be on him, pinning him against the wall with his long, sharp horns. There was no time now to get out of the corner. He just had to stay and take it. He squeezed himself as far back as he could between the radiator and front fender of the truck—and waited.

"Well," says Tony, "he came—eyes all red and steam coming out of his nostrils. He hit sideways, luckily for me, with his head hard up against the fender. One horn was above the fender and the other below it. His horns had nails driven through them—for the cowboys' ropes, I suppose—and one of those nails stuck to the bottom of the fender. Then I saw my chance and reached for the other horn."

Tony says he first horn and he [illegible]. Then he reached around to the under... of the fender with one other hand and got hold of the second h... The steer ... and to push [illegible] over, but he wasn't st... enough f... time. Then he changed [illegible] and tried to pull away.

"That was just what I wanted," says Tony, "so I helped him by letting go of his horns. Once free of the fender he ran at top speed down the street toward the stadium, but he never got there, for I read in the papers that, after damaging an automobile and turning over a stand full of tomatoes, he was shot by a policeman on University avenue. That was the end of Whitey, the bad steer of the Rodeo."

Tomorrow, Florence King of Lynn gives us the recipe for adventure.

Floyd Gibbons will pay good money for good TRUE adventure stories. Hundreds of people in Boston and nearby towns have received ten-dollar and hundred-dollar bills for their yarns, and there's no reason why you can't do the same, for, as Floyd says, everybody has had at least one adventure. Thomas H. Campbell of 114 West Adams street, West Somerville, won a hundred and ten dollars for the story of his life's biggest moment, and you can do the same. TRADE Evolution DEFINED

STOCK MARKET EXPLAINED

By B. C. FORBES

What are stocks? What is the New York Stock Exchange?

Should the government take still further steps to discourage dealings in securities?

Time was when each business was owned by an individual or a family. Later, firms came into vogue; two or more men entered into partnership, into joint ownership of a concern. Most businesses then functioned only locally, not nationally or internationally.

But with the advent of machinery and rapid transportation, it became possible for a business to expand its output and its area of distribution.

To accomplish this, more money had to be invested in plants, in machinery, in materials, and distribution facilities.

This necessitated finding more capital than could be supplied by one family or by two or three partners.

Formation of a company—embracing more than one or two individuals—became the next logical step.

The birth of the present century ushered in the practice of combining various companies into one corporation—or holding company.

To finance companies and corporations, many persons had to be found who were willing to put up money to become part-owners.

Bankers and other sponsors discovered that some investors were more conservative than others. Therefore, they split ownership into "preferred" and "common" classes, the first having prior claim for dividends.

It was found that other savers of money, still more anxious for safety, unwilling to purchase shares, but were willing to invest in a security constituting a first mortgage or other direct claim upon assets. Thus "bonds" came into existence.

This device for financing big business ventures enabled American entrepreneurs, American financiers, American industrial leaders to establish larger and stronger enterprises than existed anywhere else in the world. And it was mainly through their herculean operations, their scientific mass production, that the United States rose to first place among the nations in industrial achievement, in national wealth, in living conditions for wage-earners.

Just as it is necessary to have market-places for cattle, pigs, sheep, for wheat, corn, oats and other cereals, for cotton and for other commodities, it is equally necessary to have market-places for the billions and billions of investments in the nation's industrial plants, railroads, public utilities, mines, oil properties, etc.

U. S. Smelting Report Issued

The directors of the United States Smelting Refining and Mining Company at their regular quarterly meeting held today declared a dividend of 1-3 per cent (87½ cents per share) on the preferred stock and a dividend of $2.00 per share on the common stock, payable on July 15, 1936, to stockholders of record at close of business July 3, 1936.

Estimated consolidated earnings for the first five months of this year and comparison with earnings reported for the same period last year are as follows:

	1936	1935
Gross earnings	$2,914,623	$3,302,133
Deduct: Property reserves	798,229	717,423
Net earnings	2,116,394	2,353,310
Deduct: Preferred dividend requirements	852,424	662,424
Balance	21,653,970	$1,703,086
Earnings per share on 528,745 shares of common stock outstanding	$2.71	$3.72

Earnings for the five months of 1935 included quotational gains realized from metal sales in excess of the prices at which these metals were taken into earnings at the time of production, amounting to $477,910 (equal to 90c per share of common stock).

Earnings for the five months of this year do not include any quotational gains. The net quotational gains realized during this period amounted to $82,770; but conforming with the plan described in the last annual amount report, these gains have been added to quotational reserves to offset quotational losses charged to these reserves in the latter part of 1935.

HANEY ON ECONOMICS

Monetary Policy OF ECONOMISTS WIRED To Convention

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, June 24—Yesterday, as a member of the Economists' National Committee on Monetary Policy, I approved the following telegram, which is being sent to the Democratic convention at Philadelphia.

"Reported in press that administration proposes a monetary plank continuing in hands of President present broad powers over monetary unit. (Such powers mean):

(1) "Avoiding a return to full convertibility on a gold basis, and permitting or endorsing present laws and presidential powers with respect to silver purchases;

(2) "Possibly further devaluation of gold unit, and

(3) "Authority to issue greenbacks and to utilize further inflationary devices.

"The so-called 24-hour basis policy will keep business in perpetual state of uncertainty.

"Public (is) entitled to specific statement as to the ultimate goal of present policy.

"Good faith with the American public, and evidence of understanding the nature of sound currency, will not be established unless the money, banking, and fiscal planks include the following:

"First—Provision for a balanced budget by cutting expenditures.

"Second—Pledge to insure freedom of Federal Reserve System from political domination.

"Third—Provision for return to a gold standard at the present weight of the gold dollar, unless international co-operation for restoring and improving the gold standard suggests the desirability of some slight change in the weight of our gold unit.

"Sixth—Recommend appointment of a bipartisan commision, adequately assisted by experts, to make a thorough study of existing money and banking system."

The Economists' National Committee is a strictly non-partisan and scientific organization. It includes all recognized authorities on the subject of money and banking, as well as most of the leading academic economists, such as Taussig, Schumpeter, and Bullock of Harvard, and Fairchild and Westerfield of Yale. Then there are Angell, Beckhart, and Willis of Columbia; Reed of Cornell; James of Pennsylvania; Brooks of Georgia; Kincaid of Virginia; Palyi of Chicago; Kimicy of Illinois; Rawles of Indiana; and Downie of Stanford, California—to mention just a few.

The present situation, as I recently pointed out, means that inflation is only sleeping. It means complete uncertainty as to our money, which strongly tends to hold industry down and prevent full employment of labor.

We must repeal the inflationary, money-tinkering provisions which the Roosevelt administration retains, and especially the wild buying of silver at inflated prices.

Then we must give the country assurance of a really sound monetary policy. This requires a return to a standard for the dollar, so that we can know what it is worth—now and next year.

But no standard for our money is possible as long as the government's budget is unbalanced, so that it is forced to borrow and pile up debt. We must therefore greatly reduce the wasteful spending at Washington, in order to live within our means.

The economists rightly emphasize the importance of taking the control of our banking system out of politics, and having a strictly scientific study of the situation.

All this is obviously true, and according to common sense as well as economic science.

But do you think that Messrs. Farley and Roosevelt will do anything about it? Watch their platform, and see.

PROFIT Tax Is FOUGHT BUSINESS MEN NOT SELFISH

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

New York, June 24—One of the destructive myths which clouds clear thinking on economic questions is the legend that business men are uniquely selfish.

Politicians attempt to discount criticism from business channels on the ground that it is prejudiced.

The truth, it seems to me, is that business as a human institution reflects the good and bad traits of human nature, just as politics, the professions and the universities.

Economic progress is retarded by the racketeering and other shortcomings of some business men, but business itself is the socially useful process by which upwards of 40,000,000 gainfully employed persons interchange the products of their years labor. In the circumstances, it is a first principle that government and business must work together—rather than pull apart.

It should not be glibly assumed that business men are opposed merely because their tax bill rises.

Many of them oppose the theory of an undivided profit tax.

Furthermore, business men pay taxes as individuals, but not as business men.

In their business capacity they merely act as tax collectors for the government, recouping the funds from their customers.

In commenting on this fact, Merle Thorpe, of The Nation's Business, remarked:

"When business opposes taxes . . . it is really speaking for the ultimate consumer. In a larger sense it is speaking for the social and national welfare. The less taken for politics, the more for purchasing the conveniences of life, which, after all, are the stuff out of which standards of living are made. And the stability of the nation's credit determines the stability of each individual's well-being.

"If business as tax collector stilled its voice and refused to cooperate with the tax spender, then the familiar charge of non-social selfishness might hold. Until then why not call it business statesmanship?"

The routine politician pretends to look down upon the business executive because he is guided by the profit motive. One might well inquire whether the vote seeking motive is any less materialistic.

Until public office holders are aided by improved national bookkeeping, they are likely to compare unfavorably with private managers from the standpoint of effectiveness.

The following is merely a brief outline of certain information contained in the Offering Prospectus and is subject to the more detailed statements in the Offering Prospectus and the Registration Statement, which also include important information not outlined or indicated herein. The Offering Prospectus, which must be furnished to each purchaser, should be read prior to any purchase of these Bonds.

THE COMPANY The Company was formed in 1918 pursuant to a consolidation authorized by New York Laws of 1918, Chapter 596. All of its outstanding stock is owned by Buffalo, Niagara and Eastern Power Corporation, 99.66% of the voting securities of which is owned by Niagara Hudson Power Corporation. The Company is advised that as of June 18, 1936, Niagara Share Corporation of Maryland held directly or indirectly 11.85%, Aluminum Ore Company held 9.67%, The United Corporation held 21.19%, and The United Gas Improvement Company held 7.12% of the voting securities of Niagara Hudson Power Corporation. The Company disclaims any admission of the actual existence of effective control of it by any of such stockholders by reason of such ownership. The Company and its principal subsidiary, Canadian Niagara Power Company, Limited, are engaged in the generation of hydro-electric energy by means of the diversion and use of waters of the Niagara River and in the transmission and sale of such energy, supplemented from time to time by purchased power, in large part to industrial users and to affiliated distributing companies. The Company holds a fifty-year license issued on March 2, 1921 by the Federal Power Commission. Reference is made to the Offering Prospectus for information relating to the terms of said license and, with respect to the Canadian subsidiary, to the terms of certain agreements with The Commissioners for the Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park under which its principal properties are held, and to the right of expropriation existing in the Provincial Government of Ontario. The combined properties of the Company and its Canadian subsidiary include three hydro-electric generating stations (one used principally as a synchronous condenser station and standby plant), eight substations, transmission and distribution systems, and lands.

During 1935, inter-company charges with respect to power between affiliated companies were billed on net balances. Subsequent to that year the basis of accounting was changed so that such charges were billed on a gross basis. If the latter accounting basis had been followed in 1935, the figures appearing above for Total Operating Revenues in that year would be $8,150,8.1.19, which no resultant change in Gross Corporate Income.*

After payments for rentals in the amounts of $758,571.26 for 1932, $600,000 for 1935, $600,000 for 1936 and $150,000 for the three months ended March 31, 1936. Includes Dividend revenue from subsidiaries in the amounts of $95,5.00, $550,000, $1,060,000, and $100,000 for the same periods, respectively. With respect to the $100,000 dividend payment, the earnings for the three months ended March 31, 1936 of the particular subsidiary making such payment were approximately $59,000 less than the amount of such payment.*

BONDS OF THE 3½% SERIES OF 1936 These Bonds, in the opinion of counsel for the Company, will, upon the completion of this financing and upon the discharge of the first three mortgages listed above, be secured by a first lien on substantially all property, real and personal, now owned by the Company and used by it in the production, generation, transmission and distribution of power, including all franchises, rights, easements and permits relating thereto, and on all shares of stock of Canadian Niagara Power Company, Limited (except directors' qualifying shares), subject to tax and assessment liens, and to the rights of the United States under the Federal license and to certain further exceptions set forth in the Mortgage. The Mortgage contains provisions for the issuance, under certain conditions and restrictions, of additional bonds of other series, without limitation as to principal amount, ranking pari passu with these Bonds and provides for the release of property from the lien thereof without bonds other than application in certain instances to the Trustee.

The Mortgage contains provisions for the establishment of an annual Amortization and Bond Redemption Fund commencing with the year 1942. For a description of such Fund, including the amount of the annual payments thereto which may be made by the Company, and the application of such payments, reference is made to the Offering Prospectus and to the provisions of the Mortgage filed as an Exhibit to the Registration Statement.

UNDERWRITING Subject to certain terms and conditions, the Underwriters named in the Offering Prospectus have severally agreed to purchase these Bonds from the Company at 103%, or a total of $33,142,860, plus accrued interest. Such Bonds are to be offered to the public at 104%, or a total of $33,792,720, plus accrued interest. The underwriting discounts are 2%, or a total of $649,860.

Price 104% and Accrued Interest

The Underwriters have agreed to purchase these Bonds when, as and if issued, and subject to the approval of Messrs. Davis Polk Wardwell Gardiner & Reed, counsel for the Underwriters, and to certain further conditions. The validity of the franchises of the Company and its subsidiaries, the lien of the Mortgage securing the Bonds, and certain other matters, have been passed upon by counsel for the Company. It is expected that delivery of Bonds in temporary form, exchangeable for definitive Bonds when prepared, will be made at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. on or about June 29, 1936, against payment therefor in New York funds.

As more fully set forth in the Offering Prospectus, the Underwriters have authorized the purchase and sale, in the open market or otherwise, of Bonds for their several accounts, either for long or short account, within the limits and during the period set forth in the Agreement between themselves.

Further information, particularly financial statements, is contained in the Registration Statement on file with the Securities and Exchange Commission, and in the Offering Prospectus which must be furnished to each purchaser and is obtainable only from such of the undersigned as are registered dealers in securities in this State.

GENERAL FOODS

Vacations

FOR LOCAL

Workers

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Many Massachusetts workers will benefit by the General Foods program of vacations with pay for loyal, efficient workers in the company's employ for more than two years.

Few realize it but General Foods has extensive interests in New England as well as in this State.

The decision to reward hourly-rated employes was made in Boston this week at a meeting of the company's plant managers. As a result workers of the Walter Baker & Co., General Seafoods Corp., Frosted Foods Co., Minute Tapioca Co. and Atlantic Gelatin Co., all Massachusetts enterprises, will enjoy vacations with pay, if their service with the company is at least two years and more than five years they will have one week. If more than five years two weeks.

Fears that the motor industry may suffer from a large accumulation of stocks this summer are abating. Trade observers say there is some stiffening of prices and continuance of good motoring weather should result in clearing away the consumption figures. Second quarter earnings statements should prove gratifying to most of the big oil companies. At the same time stock market technicians report there are good signs of accumulation in the oil group. We would take a more friendly attitude toward the group during recessions.

Notebook: Food and dairy shares have been making their way toward higher prices in their typically leisurely fashion . . . From a purely investment standpoint we still favor such situations as First National Stores and General Foods . . . Since our first mention both issues have climbed in steady fashion . . . And the first still returns a whale lot more than 5 per cent . . . while the second may increase imbursements substantially during the balance of the year to bring buyers at current levels the same return.

The sharp upturn in blue chip industrials and speculative issues early this week is deserving of more than cursory examination. First, because the rally, after negotiating an important resistance barrier, failed to do anything of note and, second, because the factors behind the selective strength are not particularly impressive on a second glance. To us it seemed based on the adjournment of Congress, and the tax bill bordered on the indiscriminate. Further frozen stocks rushed to cover and, as a result, some prices literally took on wings. Some reaction would improve the situation.

This and That—In our opinion a reaction by the industrial section to 153-156 area on the Dow-Jones index would do more good than harm . . . At the same time we would not care to see the rails do much more than ease about a point . . . And, of course, a drying up of volume is asked . . . Then new buying could be undertaken without fears the list had abet its bolt and completely failed in its efforts to set a new peak above that seen early this year . . . In fact a sidewise move developed after such action it would seem at least an even wagger the new peaks would be seen before the end of summer.

PIG IRON Activity Gains

The New York district pig iron market has been showing improvement in recent weeks, indicating a rising rate of foundry activity in the area, last week is estimated that more than 4000 tons changed hands, with possibly more iron being sold under cover. At present several thousand tons are under negotiation.

Pig iron prices were not advanced for third quarter when steel mark-ups were announced. However, there is some feeling that there may be an advance in quotations for fourth quarter delivery.

THE EDISON ELECTRIC ILLUMINATING COMPANY OF BOSTON

DIVIDEND NO. 159

A quarterly dividend of $2.00 per share has been declared, payable August 1, 1936, to stockholders of record at the close of business on June 30, 1936.

Checks will be mailed from Old Colony Trust Company.

THOMAS K. CUMMINS, Treasurer.
Boston, June 24, 1936.

MARKET Works HIGHER

CHRYSLER IN VAN OF RALLY

New York, June 24—Chrysler drove its way to a new 6-year high in today's stock market and other selected issues loped along in its wake.

The list had a few soft spots, however, and was irregular at the start. The activity was small in most groups at the approach of the fourth hour.

Dividend hopes, inspired by surplus profits penalties in the new tax bill, spurred buying in certain stocks. Utilities seemed a neutral influence. Other news was a bit spotty.

Aside from Chrysler, which got up more than 3 points, Westinghouse leaped ahead 2 when the directors voted a $1 payment not common against 75 cents in the two preceding quarters.

Other gainers included General Motors, Western Union, Timken-Detroit Axle, Chicago Pneumatic Tool, Du Pont, Rossbach, Douglas Aircraft, Allied Chemical, Air Reduction, Corn Products, Loew's, Ward Baking and Bethlehem Steel. Youngstown Sheet & Tube, J. I. Case, Zenith Radio, International Nickel, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, American Power & Light, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Consolidated Oil, Pure Oil and Continental Oil.

U. S. Steel, Auburn, Radio, American Can and Consolidated Edison were inclined to slip.

Bonds were mixed, as were commodities. Foreign currencies were narrow in terms of the dollar.

Steel Outlook

Holders of steel shares noted that Iron Age sounded a rather gloomy note in its weekly review of the industry.

The survey pointed out that, while ingot production is being maintained at 71 per cent of capacity, the long-term outlook "is far from encouraging." The peak of forward buying was said to have passed and summer prospects are "clouded by ominous uncertainties."

The labor situation was seen as one of the principal disturbing factors.

The recent boost in prices was believed to have been prompted by expectations that new wage increases will be necessary. But even more serious, it was added, "is the growing hostility of the federal government."

Of prime interest to followers of the utilities was the statement of the Edison Electric Institute showing power production for the week ended June 20, expanded to the highest level ever recorded.

At the beginning of foreign exchange transactions the French franc was up .06¼ of one cent at 6.60½ cents, and sterling was ⅛ of a cent easier at $5.02¾.

Sharp Gain Seen For Carloadings

New York, June 24—A continuation of the railroad freight movement around the 1936 peak levels and a sharp widening of the rate of gain over last year is indicated by initial individual reports on revenue carloadings in the week ended June 20.

Preliminary estimates are that loadings last week were around 690,000 cars, against 686,812 the preceding week. A total of 600,000 would hold the Dow-Jones loadings index at the 76.3 level established in the preceding week.

WESTINGHOUSE Raises Dividend

New York, June 24 (AP)—Directors of Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. today boosted the dividend rate with declaration of a $1 payment on the common stock.

In the preceding two quarters dividends of 75 cents were declared. In August and November, 1935, payments of 50 cents were made.

LONDON PRICES Firm

London, June 24 (AP)—The closing tone of the stock market was firm with general buying throughout the entire list. The industrial group was in demand, especially steel and rubber issues.

Aside from strength in International Nickel, transatlantic stocks gave ground.

Fred Allen Bids Radioland Fond Farewell

By N. F. T.

He and she, or both, collectively classifying the rank and file of us fun-loving radio rooters, who would laugh their last for a long time at Fred Allen antics on the air, should by all means tune in (WEEI) to "Town Hall Tonight" at 9 o'clock.

This evening marks the takeoff on a well earned vacation period for Fred. He's admittedly a very tired fellow at this writing. Figuring out ways and means of being comical and considerately coming through in fine fashion, is far from as easy of accomplishment as it might seem, except for Dave Egan. Thus and so, there's a 16 week stretch ahead during which "Stoop nagle and Bud" will be batting in the Wednesday night loud-speaker lineup while Fred lays off to relax in the far reaches of Maine.

FLEETING FLASHES

So they're replacing Jacques Renard merely mulling with that of Eddie Duchin during the Burns and Allen program (WNAC) tonight at 8:30 p. m. Rumory rumblings are also abroad that another singer will replace "Mittie-Wittie" Watson. Yes, and all bands are extremely secretive about who the new soloist will be. We shall see what we shall hear.

It was facetious "Fibber McGee" who said he required two evenings in order to hear his favorite radio comedy team—named Burns and Allen. Explanation is that he has in mind Bob Burns and Fred Allen.

Philadelphia starts calling the country again at 10 o'clock. Sure enough, the Democrats are doing dial duty once more through about every station your set and mine can catch tonight. Try to annex anything else but the NBC-WJZ, WBZ, WAAB and WMEX waves roll in.

Ed Wynn reached into his "grab bag" last evening and pulled out an interesting personality. He introduced Arthur Donovan, the Louis-Schmelling fight referee.

HAILING A HIGHLIGHT

Among the all too few really smart shows being broadcast on these days and nights, this column conductor hereby nominates the excellent "Uncle Ezra" broadcast each Monday, Wednesday and Friday between (WEEI) 7:15 and 7:30 p. m. There's human interest and sage humor aplenty practically every time out. Likewise a demonstration of technique and commercial announcement timing that many a high priced broadcast builder would do well to study. Pat Barrett does the "Uncle Ezra" impression.

From a well-constructed letter in hand and bearing the signature R. W. R. of Roslindale (address included) comes an inquiry as to how carefully the judges actually check some of the box-top and label contest entries forwarded following a heavy radio ballyhoo bombardment. Rarely is the winning slogan or saying announced, claims the writer. Only the sponsors of such offerings vary in a position to provide the satisfactory answer—which they certainly should be glad to afford the public. As for advice, there R. W. R., just mention to the dealer what you want to know and expect to find out, otherwise tell him he can keep the blankety-blank stuff on his shelf. As far as you are concerned, Zinga-bang—that ought to start something.

Reaches Her Peak In Dramatic Roles

But it wasn't until she was given a chance to do straight romantic roles that she reached the peak of her popularity—where she now stands.

Myrna Loy has no burning ambitions about where she wants to go from here. And aside from her work, she has no great enthusiasm about anything in particular.

"I lead a very calm and quiet life," she said, "and I think I have what you might call a 'happy disposition.'

"I enjoy sports, and when I was a little girl I was quite a tomboy. I was brought up on my father's ranch in Montana, and it taught me to love the out-of-doors."

At present Myrna has an apartment in Beverly Hills—a very small apartment, she said.

"I don't like to talk very much about anything. I'd much rather listen."

That's a girl after many a man's heart — and Myrna Loy doesn't just pretend to listen. She is really interested in what other people have to say. Perhaps that's one reason why she is so popular wherever she goes.

It isn't, now that I come to think of it, anything that Myrna Loy says that gives you such a clear idea of the sort of person she is. But when you are with her, her personality is very definitely there—behind her smile and behind her eyes. And the adjectives that suit her best are: Quiet, unassuming, friendly, and frank.

If you want to know what others think of her, ask anyone around the set on which she is working—including carpenters, painters, prop boys, directors and actors. They will all tell you that they're "crazy about Myrna."

Engaged to Wed Hornblow, Jr.

"Not that I'm restless," she added with a slight shrug. "I just like to change now and then. But some day I want to have a house of my own, with a huge garden around it."

I noticed, suddenly, that on her left hand she wore an engagement ring and a wedding ring. They were only "props," but they reminded me to ask her if she happened to be engaged at the moment.

"Well—practically," she said, smiling. "To Arthur Hornblow, Jr. He's a producer—and we've known each other for a long time."

Then she lit a cigarette and smoked in silence for a while. At last she said, simply:

"I don't like to talk very

SEYMOUR SHOZE

By ART MOGER

1—Were the Louis-Schmeling fight pictures photographed by a newer and clearer process than heretofore used?

2—Did Brian Donlevy appear in silent films?

3—Did Evelyn Knapp, in "Three Of A Kind," attend college?

5—Is Berton Churchill under contract to any major studio?

A perfect summer-blend of entertainment is offered you at the RKO Keith's Boston Theater, beginning today. The attractions are "Human Cargo," a thriller with Brian Donlevy and Claire Trevor, and "Three of a Kind," a gay comedy. An added attraction is the exciting Joe Louis-Max Schmeling fight films, truly the "battle of the century."

Answer the questions above and send your completed set of six at the end of the week to Seymour Shoze, Boston Evening American, Boston. Those sending in the neatest and most accurate answers will receive one of our many awards which include 100 of the famous 1936 B. V. D. Swim-Suits, made popular by your favorite Hollywood players.

Additional prizes include 20 dozen of the Draper and Maynard new Blue Fox golf-ball, with the improved thin cover. Other awards are cash and theater tickets.

Weather Report

FORECAST TILL 8 P. M. THURSDAY

For Boston and Vicinity—Continued showers this afternoon and tonight, probably followed by clearing towards morning; Thursday fair and slightly warmer; moderate northeasterly winds, diminishing Thursday.

Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and Connecticut—Rain today and tonight, Thursday generally fair with slowly rising temperature.

Atlantic Coast, Eastport to Sandy Hook—Fresh to strong northeasterly winds, diminishing Thursday; rain tonight, followed by partly cloudy Thursday.

Fire Weather Hazard—For the woods and fields, moderate to occasionally high.

GENERAL CONDITIONS

Rain is falling along the Atlantic coast from North Carolina to New England, and unsettled conditions prevail over all eastern districts under the influence of a disturbance that has moved northward from off the Virginia capes and is now about south of Nantucket, where the pressure is 29.82. Over the Mississippi Valley and Plateau region it is clear and cool from Kansas northeastward through the Lake region, where the pressure is highest, at Sable Island, N. S., 30.40 inches. A moderate depression appears in the Northwest, 29.64 inches, at Kamloops, and another in the Southwest, 29.92 inches, at Los Angeles. There is little change of modified polar Atlantic air off the Middle Atlantic coast.

In central New England and Vermont, on Friday, are temperatures for probably fair and moderately warm.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

Franklin Field at Blue and Talbot avenues, which has been definitely set aside as the site of the Outdoor Wing Model Plane Air Races on Monday, July 6, is the scene these days of test flights by members who will compete for the New England championship.

Among those who have recently been testing models there and expect to do so again Sunday and at other favorable periods are "Art" Sampson, Levy Yarmoha, Sanford Orinoco, Dominics Sullivan and "Sid" Malerstein.

Sanford has two gliders, two twin stick models and two cabin models, he says, one of the two Bernard Woodman twin stick models made a flight of 40 minutes 24 seconds. Levy has a new home-made winder that has attracted the other boys' interest. He had ill-luck with one model when it dropped to the street and was run over by an auto. He was able to fix it, however.

Frank A. Barrett, Brighton, is testing at a field near his home. He has two cabin models, two stick models and three gliders and is fairly well satisfied with their performance.

Bernard Woodman, Everett, was $2 richer following a recent contest by the Leaping Lenas squadron at Clark's Field, north of the East Coast Airways, the president of which is Lieutenant John T. Griffin. Bernard won the stick event with a flight of 2 minutes 6 seconds and the cabin event with a flight of 1 minute 32 seconds. Allen Kenney was second in the stick event with a flight of 1 minute 39 seconds and Jack Bronski was second in the cabin event with a flight of one minute flat. John Jacobs, former commander of the unit, was first in the glider event with a flight of 32 2-5 seconds and received $1 while Martin Phillips was second with a flight of 29 seconds.

Drifting Rowboat Recovered at Sea

A "runaway" rowboat with the name "Turner" on its stern was found drifting eastward three miles off Boston Lightship last Thursday by Captain Matthew Whalen of the Trawler William J. O'Brien, he announced today on returning from Georges' Banks.

Democratic Revolt Against Raw Deal Is Healthy Sign

THE Democratic Party, the true Democratic Party of history and principle, so misrepresented and betrayed by the Administration in Washington which calls itself Democratic, found voice in the ringing and timely statement addressed to the Democratic Convention by Alfred E. Smith and Messrs. Colby, Reed, Ely and Cohalan.

"As men who believe in the principles, teachings and traditions," the statement proceeds, "of the Democratic Party, as they were personified by Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson and Grover Cleveland, we urge you who meet, in the name of the party made glorious by the records of those men, to emulate their examples."

The tragic folly and waste of the New Deal, its exhaustion of the nation's resources, its failure to relieve unemployment, its addiction to dictatorship and a social philosophy alien to our soil, its treachery to the Constitution, its disrespect toward the Supreme Court, its plain attempt to substitute tyranny for freedom, its endeavor to buy the Presidency by the misuse of public funds and the employment of money, appropriated for human relief, to promote the re-election of the President — are scorchingly reviewed in sentences that are stern, biting and irrefutably true.

The New Deal party is told, in effect, that it has forfeited its right to the name Democratic, and the demand is made that it adopt some descriptive which will reflect the un-Democratic principles of the regimented state for which the Roosevelt party strives.

The President's responsibility for the desertion of the party which elected him and of its principles is put squarely up to him.

The convention is called upon, if it has any sense of its duty to the country or to the party whose name it stultifies, to substitute as its nominee a "genuine Democrat" in place of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Throughout the country the importance of this statement has instantly been perceived —its significance as a SIGNAL OF DEMOCRATIC REVOLT.

Its signers are men of stature and authority — a former nominee of the Democratic Party for the Presidency, four times previously the Governor of the State of New York; a Democratic Secretary of State of the United States; a Democratic Senator of long and eminent career; a Democratic Governor of the State of Massachusetts, and a distinguished Democratic jurist of New York.

They are men who have brought DISTINCTION TO THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY. They have deserved as well as enjoyed its confidence.

The stand taken by these sincere men GIVES GENUINE PROMISE THAT THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY may again become self-governing.

In any event it augurs well for America that in time of danger, Americans will rise above political subserviance and even rebuke a party of their own—if it wavers in loyalty to the country and the principles of freedom.

A Real Representative

THE RETIREMENT from Congress at the expiration of his present term of Representative Tilman B. Parks, marks the passing from public life, for the present at least, of a statesman who will leave behind him in Washington an enviable record of devoted service to the national defense of his country.

While faithfully representing his own constituents of the Seventh District of Arkansas, for the past 15 years, he has been broad enough in his stalwart Americanism to visualize the nation and its needs as a whole. This is an attribute so rare today as to be deserving of the highest praise.

As chairman of the military sub-committee of the House Committee on Appropriations, in his closing term, Mr. Parks was largely instrumental in bringing before the House, with the full support of his committee, an appropriation bill which for the first time in many years recognized the deplorable state of weakness into which the United States Army had been permitted to sink, and presented an intelligent program for its improvement.

FOR the first time also in many years, under the leadership of Mr. Parks, the attention of Congress was directed to the Pacific.

Accompanied by Representative John F. Dockweiler, of California, who gave him constant encouragement and support, and by other members of his sub-committee, Mr. Parks a year ago made a personal examination of the defenses of the West Coast, from Seattle to San Diego, of the Panama Canal, and of the Hawaiian Islands.

The committee was impressed with the strategic importance of the Pacific, gathered valuable data at first hand, and incorporated the ideas obtained in the Army Bill of this year which gives the country its first adequate defense program since the close of the World War.

IT is, unhappily, unusual to find a public servant who maintains his enthusiasm to the very close of his appointed term of office. It is a weakness of human nature to lose interest in a duty which is soon to be relinquished.

Mr. Parks has known for a long time that he would not be a candidate to succeed himself in Congress with the expiration of his present term.

The indefatigability of his zeal for the national defense thus grew from no selfish motive, but from the highest instincts of disinterested love of country.

With his retirement the Army will lose a valued supporter, Arkansas a faithful servant, and the nation a patriotic and most efficient legislator.

Salute to Canada!

CANADA is also getting ready to declare that the New Deal party is over in the Dominion.

Like her neighboring democratic country, Canada has a SUPREME COURT that decides without fear or favor.

In a test of eight "Bennett laws" which involved all the unconstitutional devices of the American Raw Deal, Canada's high court decided two were invalid, two valid, one partly valid and on three decisions they recorded a tie vote.

The Canadian NRA, called the Natural Products Marketing Act, was UNANIMOUSLY declared unconstitutional BECAUSE IT INVADED THE SOVEREIGN RIGHTS OF THE PROVINCES.

The Employment and Social Insurance Act was declared invalid by a vote of 4 to 2.

The significance of these eight Canadian Supreme Court decisions lies in these facts:

That in Anglo-American countries THE CONSTITUTION IS STILL SUPREME.

That the rights of inviduals and the constituent groups of the government are paramount to CENTRALIZED LEGISLATION.

That the democratic idea that majority rule is the law holds in Canada as well as in the United States.

The Dominion, evidently, has as little stomach for alien-minded and crackpot experiments as have the great bulk of the American people.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Are you one of those free souls like I am, the kind who's always planning dashing, dangerous adventures but can't be bothered to do the common, tiresome, little things that fill the other fellow's time?

"Little Things" . . . plugging programs . . . petty excitements . . . colorless interests . . . monotonous gestures . . .

Elsie Robinson

Does the very thought of them give you the "screaming meanies?"

Provided such is the case, I'm handing on a small personal experience which was good for what ailed me.

A HE-MAN TASK

Whenever I can escape captivity I hive—as you may know—way back in the Sierra Nevada brush with wolves, buzzards and bootleggers and other congenial, roving spirits. Over the years, we've built a bunch of log cabins. The other day we decided to move one of them down to the main outfit.

Ever try snaking a husky, ha-man log cabin down a mile, over ledges, across gullies, through a tangle of bull pines and chaparral that's never had a shave since Adam bit into that first apple? Then you know we picked ourselves a honey job!

However, despite our howls of anguish, the job was a honey and we were having the time of our lives. Two of the men, stripped to their brown sinews and gleaming like wet seals, adjusted blocks and cables . . . Henton rods the 22 "cat," bucking like a bronco as it took the falls . . . and I worked ahead, cutting brush.

This was the life—said I to myself. Nothing trivial about this! Not one of those piffling, puttering, little chores women usually perform. A regular job with a wallop! The kind of a job that got you somewhere, as those little programs never did!

Midway in the modest monologue I stopped for a breather. Good to lean back against the old pine, lift the demijohn—heavy in its wet, sack covering—feel the icy nip of mountain water cutting through salt-caked lips, dust-choked throat. Behind me loomed the forest—thunderdark. Before me spread the long lift and lope of the mountains, thinning to violet haze. Somewhere a jay squalled—a squirrel chattered—some wild thing scuttled for its hole. And here was I in the middle of it all, bossing the whole works!

LIKE LIFE ITSELF

Just then my hand fell on the cable we'd been using. Somehow I'd never noticed before what a slight thing it was—that cable. Hardly half an inch of steel, but there it was—pulling along a house as heavy as a ship, holding firm against the bucking of that snorting "cat," and the grip of those aged stumps. Some baby, to stand all that pulling!

And it was that cable—that slender cable, made of those filamentlike wires—that was doing the whole job. Without its power the "cat's" fierce energy, the brawn of its operators' backs, my own blustering—would all have gone for nothing. It was the cable that was pulling us through.

Suddenly it came to me, the truth I've spent 53 years of noisy, selfish life resisting. It wasn't the big, daring deed that carried life through . . . it was all the little acts, the obscure, monotonous, day-after-day acts of decency and loyalty and pleading purpose that did the trick!

New York Day by Day -:- By O. O. McIntyre

New York, June 24—With the Saxophone fading and the ukulele almost extinct, the guitar is in throes of revival. A guitar solist at Carnegie Hall this spring packed the hall. And there is scarcely a review of big radio show without one of the expert twangers.

O. O. McIntyre

In midtown where the upstairs music schools feature banjo, saxophones and accordion, the advertisements now place the guitar first. On Lexington avenue there is a "guitar college." In the musical instrument shops around town the windows display the guitar chiefly.

Young folks on Long Island are reported thrumming in the moonlight and in the public parks at sundown young romanticists are bringing their guitars to practice.

The back rooms of old time saloons always had an accomplished guitar twanger. Usually he had hands suggesting the orang-outang and could reach any chord imaginable on the fretboard. He played solely by ear and, no matter the sharps and flats, he could always improvise an accompaniment.

Walt Disney, on his recent visit to town, talked chiefly of his animated cartoon production of that gem of our childhood, Snow White. His studio will devote a year and a million dollars to it—the greatest gesture of the Disney set up. We wonder if the more modern generation thrills to the reading of Snow White, especially when the despicable Queen said to her looking glass: "Looking glass upon the wall, who is fairest of us all?" And how gratified we were when the looking glass at last answered: "Queen, thou are of beauty rare —but Snow White, living in the glen, with the seven little men, is a thousand times more fair."

It was heartening to see New York turn with such interest to the international stamp exhibit a few weeks ago. The Grand Central Palace had three floors filled with collections. For years I skated around the word philatelist and then, began using it when I heard a veteran editor pronounce it. But he used the long a and I noticed at this show they flatted the a. Of course, the accent is on the a.

Rarity in stamps does not intrigue me but I enjoy the richness of the shades. Especially those of Hawaii, which issued certain oranges, greens and violets that beggar description in the exotic beauty of their inks.

Not many know that a little white slab marks the grave of Trooper, a brave French dog, on the site of the Statue of Liberty. Trooper served as a messenger during the days of war-torn France, showing loyalty and immense bravery under heavy bombardment. After the war he was retired to the little army post on Bedloe's Island. When the dog died special permission was granted the U. S. Department of the Interior to bury him at the base of the island's flag pole.

Since the passing of Karl K. Kitchen the town seems to have no outstanding gourmet. Kitchen was a walking encyclopedia of those undiscovered little dining places where one walked through kitchens, back yards or lost alleys to reach heavenly food. Places that had a limited clientele and discouraged the rabble. There are hundreds of them. Generally run by husband and wife who do almost everything that is to be done and are in a gurgle of delight when patrons eat heartily.

Billy Seeman usually has a small list of them which he gives only to trusted intimates. Once "discovered," somehow they expire.

There is on Montmartre's highest peak a tiny eight-tabled outdoor restaurant called Coo-Coo. It is one of Bob Ripley's favorites in Paris. One woman does all the serving and sometimes diners must wait an hour. They serve a meal that totals about a dollar. One never knows what is to be served and if one does not eat all, tables will be reserved when he returns, from then on.

Paul Morand discovered it and wrote a panegyric in Figaro. For several days afterwards crowds swarmed there and it was closed until people forgot.

George Buchanon Fife, New York's dandy of journalism, tells of the time he was caught inside a fire line without credentials. Given a push by a cop, he exclaimed: "I happen to be a newspaperman." Glancing at his spats and cane the cop sneered: "Happen is the word buddy."

Isn't It So?

The War on Rabbits

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Australia has given up its fight to exterminate rabbits, according to a news dispatch from Melbourne. Guns, poisons, gas, dogs and national rabbit rodeos all have failed. The Australian jacks seem to be the Scriptural meek who will inherit the earth.

Edwin C. Hill

"The conies are but a feeble folk yet make their houses in the rocks," wrote King Solomon, Feeble, indeed, but still just about the toughest vital quadruped on the planet. The Australian story doesn't mean that the rabbits will take the country, but they get a sizeable patch of it—possibly more than Mussolini got in Ethiopia—as the Council of Scientific and Industrial Research throws up the sponge.

Thomas Austin was a mellow old Englishman who wanted his estate to remind him of his ancestral acres in England. So, in 1859, he had 24 rabbits shipped from Liverpool. He loosed 13 of them in his beautiful Barwon Park. Six years later, he killed 20,000 and there were many more left. In 20 years they have spread north and east through Victoria and New South Wales.

MILLIONS SURVIVE

Trapping, poisoning, fumigating digging went on for years on the scale of a good-sized war. Rabbits were killed by the millions, but their amazing fecundity won every decision. For a while it was thought that the "free feed" trick would win the war for the two-legged battalions. The rabbits were lured out by the thousands by carrots and apples on which there was no poison. After this had gone on for a few days, midnight workers would dose the bait with strychnine. At dawn, the bunnies would flop in windrows. Hundreds of thousands were killed in this way—and millions came to their funeral!

So every resource of money, science and ingenuity was mobilized against the enemy, so far with the rabbits winning. It is estimated that the Australian loss from the rabbit devastations is more than $500,000,000.

Such fecundity is nature's answer to those who disturb her checks and balances. But it can be stupid, as well as persistent. In 1923, an American gunboat dropped three rabbits on Lisianski Island, of the Hawaiian group. The rabbits, multiplying rapidly, ate every living thing on the island and then died of starvation. A few years later their bones were found in shiploads quantities on the island.

DAMAGE IN WEST

Western American farmers have fought rabbits as a ruinous pest for many decades. On Smith Island, in Puget Sound, they ate everything but the lighthouse. They caused whole counties to be abandoned in Idaho. The battle against the prairie scootery is annually renewed in Kansas, Colorado, New Mexico, Wyoming, Nebraska and other rabbit states.

Near San Bernardino, Cal., they organize annual motorcycle rodeos, round up the rabbits for scores of miles and, with sprocket and dust, close in on a large desert area and kill them by the thousands—again without any noticeable drop in the birth rate.

Jack rabbits have figured in some quite important New Deal goings on. After that shelter belt of trees, from Canada to Mexico, was projected, 20,000 acres were planted. While the rabbits don't read the papers, they seemed to have learned about it overnight, and there they were, devouring the saplings and getting a break for their mismanaged economy. Exit shelter belt.

Gradually, around urban and suburban regions, they are more or less exterminated, but in the wide open spaces they are still going strong. Out in Colorado, coursing rabbits with greyhounds is still fine sport, and one which discloses, incidentally, that it is not by fecundity and speed alone that the rabbit survives.

Colorado has made progress in exterminating rabbits, but is not altogether a two-legged triumph. Coyotes are the shrewdest and cleverest enemies of the jack rabbit. A lazy, insolent-looking coyote, loping along, doesn't look as if he were going anywhere, but he is, and going a lot faster than it may appear. He is just about even up with the jack on speed, but it take two coyotes to catch a rabbit and they work a trick which shows how much smarter they are than the hounds.

COYOTES HELP

One coyote hides behind a Mexican amole bush or a clump of bunch grass. The other flushes a jack and begins a long, tantalizing chase, not too hurried, mainly concentrated on keeping the outer arc of the run-around and working the jack down to a shorter radius. In time, the coyote will tool the jack right by the soap bush, where the other nails him.

Old timers in the West, who have watched this performance time and again, tell me that the two coyotes always divide the prey evenly, and then start over again, putting in a full day shift at it.

"Dear Govt."-:- By Winston Norman

Convenshun Hall, Filadelphia

DEAR MR. ROOSEVELT:

Well, Mr. President, how are we doin? Are us Democrats makin enuff radio noise at your convenshun? This is your unemployed deligate speakin. I am right here in the Convenshun hall, so if any-body gives a loud yell in your ear, it's me.

Please tell Mr. Farley if the deligates isn't makin enuff hoopla. We got to make this the loudest party that ever run the Govt, so as even the deafest taxpayer can hear what he is gettin feer his money.

Say Mr. Roosevelt, why don't you quit bein bashful & come up here? The 1st meetin is goin on now, and 14,000 happy faces is settin on their seats, waitin for Mr. Farley to shush them with a hammer.

Say Mr Roosevelt, if noize is good govt, that's us. And by golly with all the badges we are wearin on our front end, you would think we won a war instead of a election. Some of the deligates is wearin red badges with a nose to match, others is green, others is blue, and so on down the rain-bow to the pot of gold in the treasury.

For heaven sake, who is that back there? It's deligates from the Filipino Islands. I thought them Filipinos wanted to be independant, why did they come to a Democrat convenshun?

Well Mr President the next thing on our notice is the back platform. We are goin to like your platform very good when Mr Farley lets us see it. As far as I'm personal, the only thing in a platform which I want is softer lunches for unemployed folkes, 10 million of us would thank you very much.

As fer the question of gold, us Democrats don't want no gold, but we will be glad to take paper money or a check.

Well that fixes everythin in the U S, except one thing. Do you remember back in 1932, Mr Pres when you got elected on booze fer the forgoten man? Well, the booze is now waiting for him, so all he needs in 1936 is money enuff to buy it with.

Well Mr Roosvelt, Tammany just begun a parade for you, so I will close and fall in.

Yours Till Tomorow,

W. NORMAN.
